Busing Issue Heated

An emotional crowd of approximately 380 parents and townspeople interrupted school committeemen and any other speakers they disagreed with Tuesday night, until the committee responded to 1,245 petition signatures with a motion designed to restore full busing services - but not out of the expense budget!

The mood was remarkably similar to that of the town meeting which cut the school expense budget by $103,000 and told the same school committee to take $43,000 of it out of the transportation budget; but Tuesday night's schoolcommittee audience insisted that the committee restore money it had cut from the transportation budget.

St. Robert's Country Day Programs

The children at St. Robert's Country Day School are having a busy schedule for the last weeks of school.

Last Thursday, "Ecology Day" was observed, and the pupils collected litter, rocks and weeds from the school yard and planted flowers in both their yard and at the church May shrine.

On Wednesday of this week, a special children's Mass will be celebrated for them by Fr. John Mulloy at 9 a.m. Father Roger from the Christian Formation Center on River Road, and Mrs. Randall Hoyle of Tewksbury will provide guitar music and the children will sing at the special May celebration.

On Monday night of this week the second annual Parent's Night was held at 8 p.m. at the school. Parents of both old and new pupils attended. Chairman John Roche of the Parent's Board gave a report of the year's activities. Election of next year's Parent's Board took place. A movie of the school's trip to Drumlin Farms was shown by the school director, Mrs. Harold O. Keegan. Refreshments and a social followed.

St. Robert's Country Day School will hold its graduation day on Tuesday, June 8 (weather permitting - otherwise the next sunny day) with a circus on the school grounds. Children (and parents) will participate in various stunts, side shows and animated animal acts.

A magician will perform and circus-type refreshments will be served. The graduation time is 9:30 a.m.

Baptist Church Bible School

A vacation Bible School will be held at the Andover Baptist Church, Essex and Central Sts. beginning on Tuesday, July 6 at 9 a.m. and closing July 16. Sessions will be held each day from 9 a.m. to noon, except on Saturday and Sunday. There is no charge to attend the school. Children of all denominations are welcome - ages 3 to 12 years. The school is a non-sectarian program designed to give the children a two-week period of fun with songs, stories, Bible work and handicrafts.

A closing program will be held on the evening of July 16 when the children will participate and display their craft work. Registration may be made at the Andover Baptist Church on July 6 at 9 a.m. Advance registration may be made.

TEACHERS FETED on retirement from Doherty are Mrs. Marjorie Jones, Miss Edna Lounsbury, Mrs. Winifred Brookover, Miss Helen Thompson and Miss Margaret Bascom.

Retiring Teachers Honored

Speaking of celebrations, one of the town's most delightful honored six retiring Doherty School teachers, in a final PTO meeting of songs and skits.

All the teachers participated in the hilarious skits of the "Doherty School of Tomorrow," written and directed by retiring first-grade teacher Marjorie Jones and parents took children's parts in another skit.

The retiring teachers were honored with personal gifts and a gift to the school from the PTO -- an air conditioner for the teachers' room, mounted with a plaque bearing their names.

Retiring this June are Miss Margaret Bascom, after 29 years of teaching, 27 of them in Andover; Mrs. Winifred Brookover, after 37 years of teaching, 21 in Andover; Mrs. Marjorie E. The entertainment's high point, which brought down the house, was

Mrs. Jones' "Hello Parents", an amusing school construction plea to the tune of "Hello Dolly," which all the teachers sang:

"Hello, Parents, oh hello Parents!

It's so nice to see you here, where you belong.

We can tell, parents, That to your pocketbooks you all are holding on.

We hear the Super saying that the building's swaying,

Because the kids are lined-up wall to wall.

So give us room to teach'em Give us the tools to reach'em

And Doherty will never be the same again.

We guarantee you Doherty will never be the same again."

Nutritionist Gives Advice

A food revolution has modified natural food beyond belief and health, through dangerous chemical additives and through revolut of the original nutrients, a famous nutritionist and author told a full house at Memorial Hall Library last week.

Beatrice Trum Hunter, author of "The Natural Foods Cookbook," "Gardening Without Poisons" and the new "Consumer Beware!", advised her listeners to begin reading the labels on the supermarket shelves.

She warned that most of the chemical additives now found on almost every packaged food are inadequately tested for long term dangers, and that many have proven toxic, mutagenic or cancer-inciting effects. An example was stilbestrol, the hormone injected into almost all livestock for fattening purposes, newly indicated by recent medical tests as cancer-inciting.

Unintentional pesticide residues are a second area of danger, she said, pointing to mercury in fish, other metals not yet publicized, and the pesticide residue tolerated in milk.

Her third concern was a great food robbery she said occurred through removal of most of the original nutrients from foods, most spectacularly from flours and breads.

Mrs. Hunter blamed diseducation by the food industry, which she called propaganda disguised as straight news or research, and lax government standards that ignored the consumer to favor agriculture or the food industry. She praised the boost which the ecology movement has given to the interest in natural foods, but said food pollution was still largely ignored, to the peril of our children and grandchildren.

Her solution? Read the labels! Don't stop eating, but choose wisely, avoiding artificial coloring; flavoring; and chemical additives. Buy fresh foods, the nutritionist advised, instead of heavily processed foods, and grow your own vegetables where you can, without pesticides.

Greater Lawrence area students took over the management of the Telephone Company on May 18 and 19.

Ten seniors, including Mark E. McGuire and Bruce A. Reynolds from Andover High School, participated in the New England Telephone TELEAD program.

This program exposed students to a large corporation and gave them an insight into a multi-management supervision.

After a day and a half of practical on-the-job experience, students had the opportunity to get together, and discuss what they had done, with the other students and telephone personnel.

The program ended with a luncheon at DiEuros Restaurant in Ward Hill, where participants were presented with certificates of achievement.

Music To Our Ears

By Edward P. Grigoli

What is Classical Music? At times we use this term rather loosely, indicating that this kind of music is different from the "popular" music of bands, musical comedy, dance tunes and jazz. "Classical" can be applied to great literature of the past. But musically speaking it stands for a period.

To make this clearer, the term "Classical" is applied to music composed between the end of the 16th and the end of the 18th centuries.

Composers of that period wrote music which kept to strict rules of form and to set patterns, rather than intending it to tell a story or paint a scene in sound. A few of the most popular composers of that period are Mozart, Haydn, Gluck and Beethoven.

The characteristics and style of each composer can be discovered only in the music itself.

They each composed many works which will be discussed in future articles.

Irving Whitcomb
... England, 1944

Irving Whitcomb
... Andover, 1971

He Was Andover's Ambassador In '44

Irving J. Whitcomb, 36 Central St., is one Andover resident who holds fond memories of Andover's 300th anniversary celebration 25 years ago as well as events preceding that great observance.

Back in 1944, a couple of years before Andover's tercentenary, Irving was stationed in Salisbury, England, at the S.F.S. Headquarters of the U. S. Army Signal Corps. He was a tech sergeant then and like everyone else over there had been up to his ears in work in preparation for D-Day, June 6, 1944.

Later that month, after the successful invasion of France, Irving decided to hop a train from Salisbury to Andover, England, a distance of some 26 miles.

Arriving in Andover Hants, which is the official name, the local soldier sought out the secretary of the town's Board of Trade, Mr. E. S. Allen, who was also an insurance broker and real estate agent. Since Irving had long experience in the insurance field, they found much in common and became close friends. They talked of the two towns named Andover.

The official title of the promotional organization there was "Andover and District Chamber of Trade."

On July 11, 1944, Irving received a letter from Allen on the trade board stationery, inviting him to a reception planned for Aug. 2 of that year at which S. R. Bell, who had served as mayor of Andover from 1939 to 1943 was to be honored.

Bell's tenure as mayor was far longer than that of any other man in recent years, and he was held in high esteem in the town.

The big event was held in the Guildhall. A portrait of Mayor Bell was unveiled and Mrs. Bell was given a diamond ring.

Irving Whitcomb of Andover, Mass., U.S.A. had a place of honor on stage and was the only GI present. He was the official representative of Andover, Mass., for the occasion.

Following the Guildhall ceremonies, a group of the invited guests went to Allen's home for dinner, Whitcomb serving as escort for an English major's wife, her husband being on duty in Africa.

"That hospitality I'll never forget," says Whitcomb today.

Time went on, Whitcomb returned to civilian life in Andover and the town prepared for its tercentenary in 1946. The local resident had maintained correspondence with Allen during the years and in the spring of 1946 sent information about the 300th anniversary here.

Allen contacted Mayor George D. Young and Mayoress Maud Sainsbury who were coming here as invited guests, and gave them a letter to Whitcomb.

When they came here in May of 1946, they presented the letter to Whitcomb and took the time to visit his home and spend the better part of an evening.

That's the saga of Tech/Sgt. Irving J. Whitcomb and Andover Hants, England, some quarter century ago.

To Bee Or Not To Be

A swarm of Bartlet St. bees made a bee-line to Memorial Hall Library last Thursday noon, and it took some quick action on the part of the police department and Stephen Lovejoy of the Bay State Bank to get the bees back in the hive where they belonged. Mr. Lovejoy happens to be a beekeeper, as well as a bank teller, so when he was contacted it was no effort at all for him to don his head and face mask, pick up an extra hive, and eventually persuade all those busy bees back under cover. In the meantime motorists and pedestrians gaped in amazement at the invasion of Elm Square. Mr. Lovejoy chose the lawn of the library as the right spot to collect his bees, so many readers were treated to a real-life adventure enroute in or out of Memorial Hall Library.

Final Art Demonstration

This evening, the final activity of the May Festival of the Arts at the library will be held. There will be a repeat demonstration of the art of macrame, which was so popular last Thursday evening. This time Mrs. Shirley McDowell will show how the knotted embroidery is done. There will be two ceramic artists, one in handbuilt pottery, Mrs. Margaret Roberts, and one on the wheel, Mrs. Joan Wilde. Mrs. Helen Collins Dooley will paint for us in oils and there will be one new craft, the making of stained glass, demonstrated by C. W. Jameson. Come one, come all, to the library at 7:30 for this last event in our very successful art festival of 1971.

Flowers . . .

. . . can make an important contribution to the traditional funeral service. Not only do they denote respect for the deceased, but flowers can be sort of a personal messenger of sympathy and understanding to survivors. Their presence tells the immediate family that their friends are thinking of them and sharing their sorrow during their bereavement.

While many customs and fashions have undergone changes over the years, the use of flowers at funerals has endured. Evidence of floral tributes have been found in excavated tombs dating as far back as ancient Egypt.

URBAN EXPANSION

"Buy lots in outlying districts, pay a small amount each month, await developments, follow your regular vocation, and in the end other people have made money for you." -- Russell Sage, American capitalist history. Displacement of agriculture has marked industrial development. Urbanization takes many forms. It used to be confined to gradual expansion of cities. Their outward growth was limited by prevailing means of transportation. Improved transportation has altered the pattern. Rapid urbanization now includes land along arterial highways. It encircles agricultural land. An uneven diffusion of urban areas sprawls over the countryside.

Rural-urban fringe areas are characterized by shifts of rural land to urban uses.

In 1959, USDA estimated 139 million farm acres were "special use areas". These include urban and built-up areas and other extensive facilities.

"Restrictive Covenants"

handing Manager Ross Tortora's nine their first loss.

There were several excellent pitching efforts in both leagues. Stealing the spotlight were Mark LaLonde of the Indians, 10-year-old Peter Morton of the Cards and Bill Emmert of the Red Sox. LaLonde fired a pair of three-hitters to beat the Red Sox (2-1) and the Twins (3-1). He also cracked a last-inning, two-run homer to defeat the Sox.

Morton, in his first pitching effort ever, tossed a brilliant one-hit shutout to whitewash the Pirates 8-0. Emmert threw a five-hitter and fanned 10 in a 10-2 Red Sox victory over the Tigers.

Giants 6, Cards 5 -- Glen Lefebvre gained the pitching victory as the Giants broke the Cards 45-game victory skein. He needed some clutch relief help in the last two innings from Joe Pasquale, who put down a pair of Cards' rallies. The pair combined for 10 strikeouts.

Billy Best belted a two-run double for the Giants, while Pasquale delivered a two-run single. Al Kurth drove home the winning run and Russ Serbage lashed a key safety. Brian Twomey clubbed a two-run homer for the losers, while Gary Needham' smashed a long triple.

The game ended on a bizarre note. The Cards loaded the bases with two out in the final inning. The last batter stroked a grounder to short, and the ball hit a cards' base-runner for an automatic third out. No one will ever know if the Giants' shortstop would have made the play to end the game, or if the Cards would have tied it.

Cards 8, Pirates 0 -- This was Pete Morton's sparkling effort, as the youngster whiffed four and held the Pirates to a single safety. The victors put the contest away with six runs in the third inning.

Leading the Cards were Gary Needham with a double and two singles, lefty Brian Twomey with three hits and John Fahey who accounted for two RBIs.

The Pirates' Wayne Hinckley spoiled the no-hit bid with third-inning single to rightfield.

Pirates 10, Cubs 7 -- Bobby Muldoon was a two-way star for Manager Len Driscoll's Pirates. The youngster pitched a five-hitter to gain the mound win, and went 3-for-4 at the plate, Billy Van-Schalkwyk cracked a clutch bingle for the Pirates.

Jon Steen and Tommy Gender ripped solid doubles for the Cubs, while Billy Walsh lined a single.

Giants 10, Cubs 5 -- Glen Lefebvre laced a triple and single, and Joe Pasquale chipped in with a two-bagger and single, to spark the Giants' offense. Lee Apgar unloaded a big triple and Al Kurth ripped a pair of singles for the victors.

Jimmy Lee worked five innings to pick up the victory, although he needed relief help from Len Foote. The talented duo combined for a three-hitter, fanning five Cubs in the process.

Tommy Gender's ringing double was the key safety for the losers. Pasquale was a defensive star at shortstop for the Giants.

6-2 entering the fifth frame, the Cards rallied to tie the game 6-6 and then went on to win with one run in the sixth stanza.

Ten-year-old Pete Morton notched the triumph in relief of John Fahey, who didn't allow a hit but issued six walks. Morton worked the last four frames.

The Cards collected five singles - one each by Jeff Hubbell, John Fahey, Gary Needham, Brian Twomey and Morton. The Braves countered with three singles by Dave Rindone, Scotty Wilton and Al Straffels.

Pirates 14, Mets 13 -- Lenny Driscoll, 10-year-old super-reliever, preserved this win for starter Bob Muldoon by whiffing two Mets' batters with the bases jammed in the sixth inning.

The host of Pirates' slugging heroes included Driscoll, who was 3-for-4. John Lyons, Kevin Moore, Bob Muldoon and Kevin Muldoon contributed two safeties apiece. Jeff Hinckley clouted a sharp two-bagger for the victors.

Paul Derby and Alex Milne banded out two hits each for the hard-luck Mets, while Lyons was a defensive wizard as catcher for the Pirates.

Giants 5, Braves 3 -- Starter Jimmy Lee and reliever Len Foote worked three innings apiece, with Mr. Foote garnering the victory. Lee had eight strikeouts.

Glen Lefebvre continued his heavy hitting with an RBI triple while Lee slammed a long three-bagger and scored two runs for the Giants.

For Manager Bob Wilton's Braves, Steve Savrann spanked a double and Mike King was a defensive standout at second base.

Cards 4, Giants 1 -- Unbeaten Brian Twomey twirled a six-hitter, whiffing three to pace the Cards. John Fahey belted a double and single for two RBIs, while Mike McCormick punched out an RBI single and John Lally lashed a long single for the winners. Lally also made two fine grabs in centerfield.

Glen Lefebvre hurled well in a losing cause. Joe Pasquale pitched the final three frames. Billy Best clubbed two doubles and a single, while Lefebvre also doubled for the Giants. Best played a fine defensive game at first base.

Giants 8, Mets 6 -- The victors stroked 13 hits, paced by Joe Pasquale's double and two singles. Pasquale also fanned seven batters in three innings of relief. Lee Apgar lined a two-bagger and single, winning hurler Jimmy Lee had a double, Al Kurth slashed a double and single, and Glen Lefebvre collected two safeties and scored the winning run.

Alex Rixby, Paul Derby and Billy Schlott drilled singles for the Mets.

Cards 15, Braves 1 -- Gary Needham and Dan Eisenhour pooled talents to fire a three-hitter and whiff six Braves' batters. Needham was the victor.

Needham, John Fahey and Eisenhour all had a double and single, while Mike McCormick and Brian Twomey added two hits apiece for the potent Cards.

"Jolting" Jeff Hubbell and Twomey were defensive stars at third and first base respectively.

Dave Rindone clubbed a triple, while Steve Savrann and Marty Solomon had singles for the Braves.

Cards 13, Cubs 9 -- The defending champs finished strong in this game, scoring seven runs in the fifth and six more in the sixth stanza.

Trip Morton came on in relief in the fifth when the score was 6-6 to pick up the triumph. He also excelled at the plate by doubling home the winning runs. Gary Needham and Pete Morton lashed two hits each, while Brian Twomey and John Fahey produced key hits in the fifth-inning uprising.

Tommy Gender drilled a brace of safeties and Jon Steen cracked a double for the Cubs.

Indians 2, Red Sox 1 -- Mark LaLonde was the entire show in this victory. The fire-balling righthander tossed a three-hitter and whiffed eight Sox. Losing pitcher Labeab Abboud was almost as good, allowing only three hits and fanning seven Indians.

The score was 0-0 entering the sixth-and-final frame. The Sox scored when Labeab Abboud doubled home his brother Omar, who had walked. But then George Starks led off the Indians half of the inning by being hit with a pitch. Up stepped young Mr. LaLonde, who picked out Abboud's first serve and belted it way over the leftfield fence for the clutch game-winning homer.

Starks and Joe Cox had singles for the other Indians' safeties, while Ricky Meuse and Paul Rosetti laced singles for the Sox.

Tigers 2, White Sox 1 -- Winning pitcher Bob Kramer and Hard-luck loser Scott Collins matched three-hitters. Collins struck out seven and Kramer five.

Young Jaimie Dion doubled home teammate Neal Faigel, who had singled, with the clinching run in the sixth. For the White Sox, Collins spanked out two hits and Glen Brody had one safety.

White Sox 12, Twins 6 -- Tim Brownlie was a two-way hero for the White Sox. In his first pitching effort, Timmy fired an eight-hitter and whiffed three to gain the win. At the plate, he was 4-for-5 with two doubles and two singles.

Brian Bresnahan, Billy McGuire and Matt Mirisola all slammed two hits, with Bresnahan collecting four RBIs along the way. Mike Henderson sparkled on defense.

Keith Eosefow, Geoff Bragdon and Jerry Stabile were all 2-for-3 to spearhead the Twins. Stabile struck out eight in a losing cause.

Indians 10, White Sox 2 -- Lefty Gerry Cox twirled a fine four-hitter, whiffing five for the victors. Mark LaLonde did it again at the plate, clouting a gigantic homer, a double and two singles for two RBIs.

George Starks banded a two-bagger and a pair of singles for Manager Larry LaLonde's crew, while Jimmy Ness ripped a two-run double.

LaLonde added a new wrinkle to his bag of tricks, starring defensively in centerfield with a one-handed running catch in the first inning.

Scott Collins clobbered a home-run for Manager Lou Mirisola's Sox, while Billy McGuire doubled and Ray Lynch and Brian Bresnahan had singles.

Red Sox 10, Tigers 2 -- John O'Frien slammed a three-run double, and Bob Cairns blasted a two-run double, to back Bill Emmert's five-hit hurling for the Red Sox. Labeab Abboud smashed two hits, Ricky Meuse doubled and Paul Rosetti laced a single. Meuse also played an excellent defensive game at second base.

For the Tigers, Eddie Collins lined a two-run single in the second stanza. Rick Collins had a double and single, Dave Alexander singled and Ray Rau also had one single. The Tigers' Rick Dow, Rick Collins and Mitch Rousseau pulled off a doubleplay.

Indians 3, Twins 1 -- Another three-hitter for Mark LaLonde, who struck out 11 Twins' batters in this one. Geoff Bragdon was a tough-luck loser, firing a three-hitter and fanning eight.

LaLonde stroked two hits and George Starks singled to spark the victors, while Steve Dubois, Neal Rosenberg and Frank Pierro had the Twins' safeties.

White Sox 10, Red Sox 5 -- The winners scored four runs in both the second and third to bolster Scott Collins' four-hit, 11-strikeout pitching.

Matt Mirisola and Brian Bresnahan drove in two runs apiece, while Greg Champagne and Bill McGuire added key hits. Losing pitcher Omar Abboud and Gary Cohen ripped singles for the Red Sox. "Terrific" Tim Brownlie has a fine defensive game at shortstop for the White Sox.

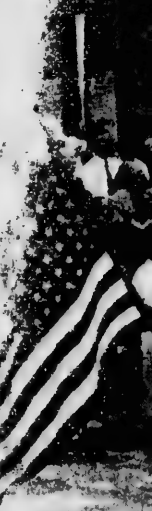

Tigers 17, Twins 11 -- The Tigers, aided by a lot of walks, hit batsmen and errors, racked up 17 runs on only five hits. The game was called after four innings by darkness. Winning pitcher Bobby Kramer K'd seven batters.

Profound Changes In A Quarter Of A Century

In the quarter century since Andover celebrated its tercentenary, the town has undergone changes more profound than any in its previous history.

In 1946, the nation was still recovering from the devastation of World War II, a conflict in which 1,750 Andover men and women served in the armed forces. The Roll of Honor of those who gave their lives listed 65 names.

The United States was about to become involved in the Cold War, a still unresolved power struggle between the Free World and the enigmatic ideology behind the Iron Curtain of Communism.

This struggle was to involve 625 men and women in the Korean conflict and, so far, another 563 in the seemingly endless sacrifices of the Vietnam tragedy.

The Second World War spawned the Nuclear Age, a phenomenon that led to the creation of weapons involved in rocketry and space, which stepped up the pace of scientific advancement so rapidly that man was able to fly to the moon, while losing the capacity to carry earthbound commuters to and from Boston, only 23 miles South of Andover.

In 1946, the American Woolen Company, with its vast factory and satellite village of Shawsheen, was the major taxpayer of Andover. But within a decade, after one final convulsion of turning out blankets for Korea, the textile giant had died, ending an era of robber barons and their unshaken faith in the immortality of blue serge suitings for the white collar class.

From a sleepy academic village, made up of a community of scholars at Phillips Academy, workers and overseers of the adjacent mills and a hardy remnant of dirt farmers, Andover became a microcosm of American suburbia.

The results were not necessarily negative. The releasing of manpower and materials following World War II led to the burgeoning of a highway system to handle the proliferation of automobiles, which in their turn were to create a new life style in the nation.

One of the prime examples of the highway system was the construction of Route 128, a state road that sliced within 10 miles of Andover, in its circumferential sweep of Boston. Along that highway, spin-off industries related to the Nuclear Age and its twin, the Space Age, sprang up and multiplied like rabbits. Many of its workers, executives and bench technicians alike, sought homes in the surrounding countryside, extending all the way to Andover, and eventually beyond into Southern New Hampshire.

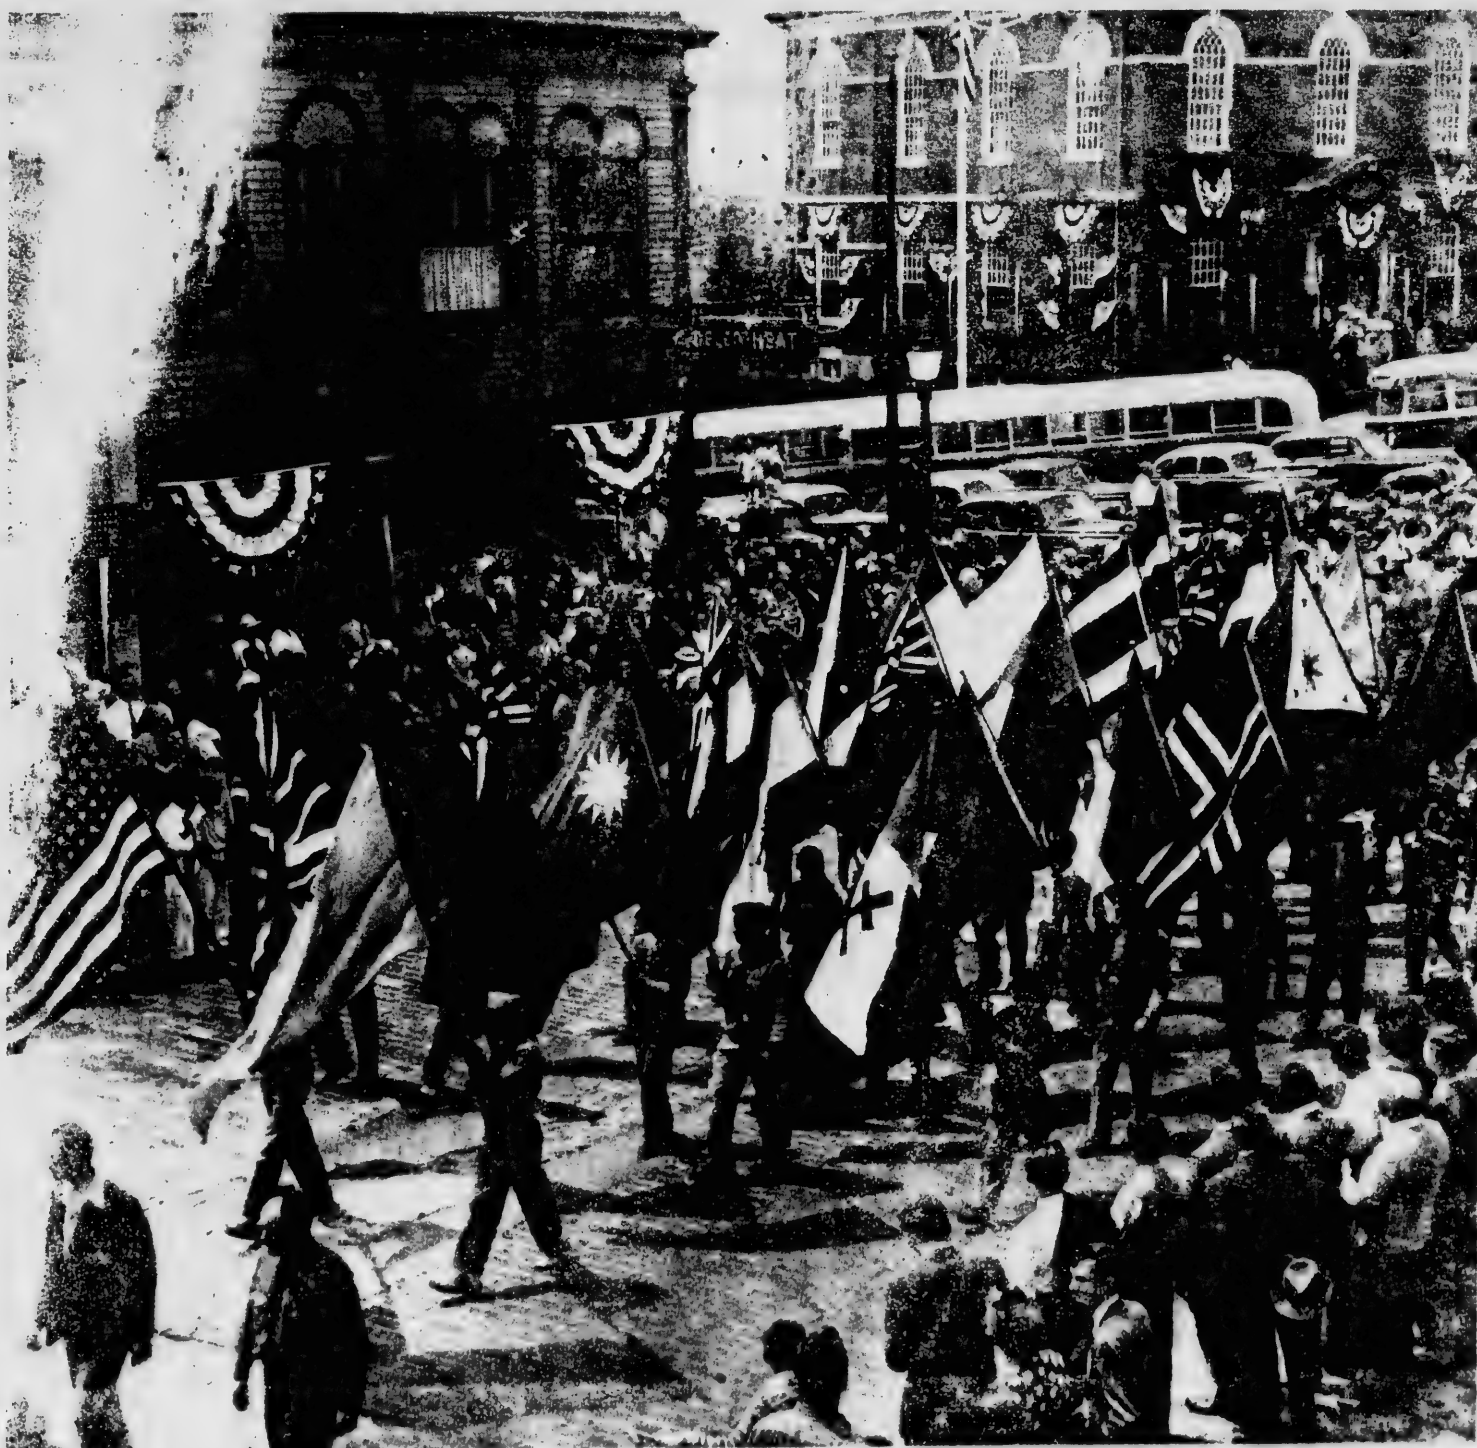

The sprawling Shawsheen mill, instead of wasting away like an ailing white elephant, was taken over by the Raytheon Company, a defense-oriented electronics organization that began to absorb the cream of the available pool of skilled workers and to attract others from afar.

Also dipping into the pool came the Western Electric Company, to build an imposing complex in neighboring North Andover and to transfer north from New Jersey a ready made generation of management personnel trained and encouraged to take part in civic affairs.

The Merrimack Valley, once a depressed segment of the New England industrial complex, began to revive. More jobs meant more people, more housing and more services. And although core cities like Lawrence suffered from declines in population, its suburbs blossomed.

The Federal highway system, inspired by legislation in the Eisenhower administration, led to the building of other throughways such as Routes 93 and 495, each opening up new lands for development, even though at the expense of creating a whole new problem of ecology, a science that is expected to become a major enterprise of the later 1970's, in a new struggle against the problems of a distressed Nature.

A new resuscitator for the fire department, a gift of the Andover American Legion Post, is presented to town officials to replace an earlier one. Left to right - Roy E. Hardy, chairman of the Board of Selectmen; Fire Chief C. Edward Buchan, commander of Post 8; Albert Cole Jr., chairman of the Legion committee that raised the funds for the new equipment, and Stafford Lindsay, chairman of a second committee that raised funds for a special resuscitator.

For Andover, these new considerations brought a housing and educational boom that led to the creation of new streets and roadways, a whole new concept of town government, a proliferation of new schools - including the need for three high school complexes within a single decade, and a host of problems brought on by an increasing population.

Although Andover still clings to the traditional form of open town meeting, it has come around to the town manager form of government, to replace the old New England system of electing some public spirited farmers or businessmen to the ancient office of selectman. The selectmen still fulfill a vital function, but much of the daily routine has been taken from them and handed on to a professional manager.

In education, Phillips has remained preeminent, although in more recent times beset by all of the problems of a permissive society, a trend toward increasing opportunities for the disadvantaged and by the spiralling costs of maintaining an elitist system of preparing adolescents for advanced learning.

But, at the same time, in neighboring North Andover, but spilling over into Andover, the demands for higher learning also have led to the establishment of Merrimack College, staffed by a community of Augustinian fathers, who have developed an institution that continues to grow in stature.

And, in recognition of the need for shorter schooling periods, for special skills, Andover has seen the establishment of the Andover Institute of Business, an institution of practical arts, and the locating here of a branch of Bryant-McIntosh Junior College, originally a school for business office practices.

The importance of business and technical skills, related to new industry, has been reflected in the location in Andover in recent years of such new enterprises as Gillette Toiletries, a modern complex constructed within handy trucking distance of Route 93 in the Lowell Junction-Ballardvale area.

And while town officials predicted that Route 93 alone, siphoning traffic from old state route 28, would restore Andover to its former image as a quiet country village, parking space remains at a premium on Main street and traffic at rush hours often becomes snarled beyond the wildest dreams of urban planners.

Much has been said about the decline of religious influence on modern society, yet congeries of churches have sprung up in the last few years. To the nucleus of St. Augustine's and St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Churches in downtown Andover and Ballardvale, has been added St. Robert Bellarmine in West Andover, a rapidly growing area.

But, in addition, there have been added a new Unitarian-Universalist Church, a Bible Chapel, a Lutheran and a Christian Science Church to meet the needs of the growing population. And Christ Church, Episcopal, has added a new Church School complex to its quasi-Victorian main edifice.

As the town has grown, its problems have increased, including finances, transportation, public schooling, drugs, youthful restlessness, an increasing opposition to the continuing conflict in Indo-China and unemployment among executives of the electronics industry. But, as it has for 325 years, Andover also continues to have a special vitality for coping.

Ten of the graduates of the Class of 1946, Pynchard High school, were veterans of World War II.

Congratulations ANDOVER!

A public school grew from 1,340 to 6,074 in January, 1971, an indication of what have taken place in the last 25 years.

The School Committee is aware of the app in classroom space and within a few help of State legislative financial aid in school houses throughout the town in proportion to new homes.

The first two new buildings to arise were in April, 1952, at School, since retirement of William Doherty in September of the Doherty retired in years as a member of the Committee.

Even so, several had been closed to the modern structure opened until renovation made to other schools.

Pynchard High School served the town for became inadequate demands on it, and Andover High School on the west side of Pynchard became a school.

Still, within a high school could challenge and a school was constructed in 1958 in the high school building Junior High School.

In all, between seven new schools additions to three erected. And only Town Meeting turned for an addition to School.

In addition to the Andover alone, the with other communities Greater Lawrence the establishment

Public Schooling Has Impact On History

A public school population that grew from 1,340 pupils in 1946 to 6,074 in January, 1971, is an indication of why vast changes have taken place in the system in the last 25 years.

The School Committee became aware of the approaching crisis in classroom space in the 1940's and within a few years, with the help of State legislation providing financial aid in construction, school houses began sprouting throughout the town, more or less in proportion to the number of new homes.

The first two new modern buildings to arise were the West School in April, 1952, and the Central School, since renamed in honor of William Doherty, was ready in September of the same year. Mr. Doherty retired in 1971 after 36 years as a member of the School Committee.

Even so, several buildings which had been closed to make way for the modern structures, were reopened until renovations could be made to other school houses.

Punchard High School, which had served the town for many years, became inadequate to handle the demands on it, and, in 1957 a new Andover High School was opened on the west side of town, while Punchard became a junior high school.

Still, within a decade the new high school could not meet the challenge and a still newer high school was constructed in the same general area in 1958. The former high school building became West Junior High School.

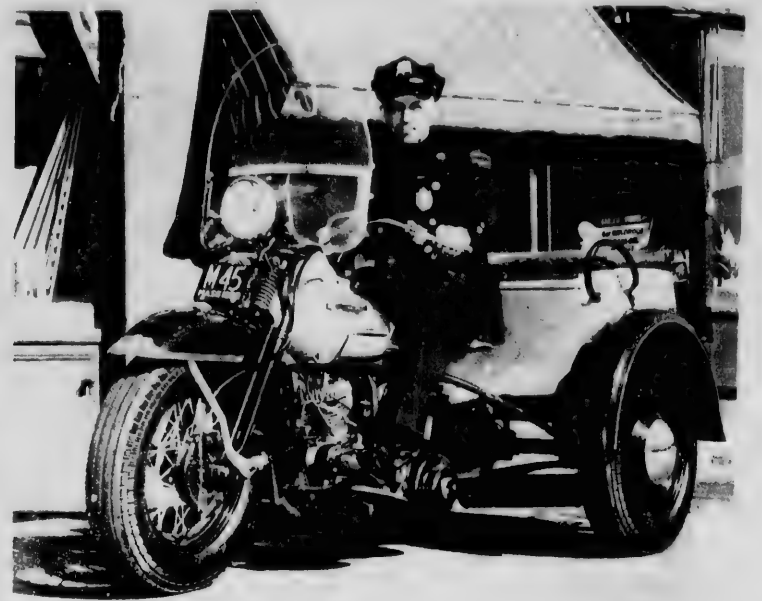

In all, between 1952 and 1970, seven new school buildings and additions to three others were erected. And only this spring, the Town Meeting turned down plans for an addition to the Doherty School.

In addition to the schools serving Andover alone, the town also joined with other communities in the Greater Lawrence area to help the establishment of a regional vocational technical high school, in September, 1965. It is situated on River Road, in West Andover.

Fur Coat For $189

Twenty-five years ago, Weiner's of Lawrence was advertising fur coats, on sale, at prices ranging from $189 to $695. The less expensive ones included lamb, beaver and muskrat. The more expensive ones were persian, leopard and seal. And the prices included a 20 percent Federal tax.

In 1954, the Andover police department tried a new vehicle, a motorcycle. Here, the late Roy Russell, who also served for many years as a school committeeman, tries out the equipment.

A Land Bargain For 6 Pounds

The Indian whose likeness appears on the Andover town seal was Cutshamache, from whom the early settlers purchased the land that now embraces both Andover and North Andover, in 1646. The price was six English pounds and a blanket; some sources say the cloth was made up into a coat.

Under the "body of liberties" of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, adopted in 1641, the deed to the transaction had to be registered with the General Court in Boston. The deed included alewife fishing rights to another Indian called Roger, for as long as he and his people refrained from harming the white man's crops.

Dial Telephones Come In 1958

When the New England Telephone Company began changing from manual to dial telephoning in 1958, there was considerable agitation to have the Andover exchange retain its identity.

But it was not to be. The letters were not adaptable to the mysteries of numerical coding. The call letters spelled Greenleaf, only to fade into limbo as subsequent directories employed the numerals 475.

The new dialing system did not entirely eliminate wrong numbers, however, as subscribers with numbers closely allied with doctor's or insurance offices can testify after running up from the cellar, out of breath, only to hear someone ask, "Is this Doctor Stethoscope's office?"

Budget Figures Reflect Growth

A review of population and budget figures for the last 25 years reveals a measure of Andover's tremendous growth since the 300th anniversary.

In 1946, with a population of 11,920, the town voted an appropriation of $817,508 for municipal services. This was reflected in a tax rate of $36 per $1,000 valuation.

Ten years later, with 14,535 persons living here, the budget figure had jumped to $2,123,469, calling for a tax rate of $60. Aware of the imbalance of assessments, the town fathers called for a revaluation of property in 1958, based on 80 per cent valuation.

In 1966, under the new assessment system, the appropriation figure stood at $6,631,520, on a tax rate of $33. The population was 20,551. The following year, property was reassessed at 100 per cent valuation. And in 1971, with the population at 23,695, the appropriation climbed to $13,578,978. Although the tax rate has not been established for 1971 there are estimates that there will be a $4 increase over the 1970 figure of $46.

Twenty-five years ago, it was easier to pick out partners on a dance floor, than in an age of rock, roll and similar new forms of tribal rites. This was a neighborhood dance, to the subdued strains of jazz.

The Phillips Academy scholastic year of 1946 was heralded by the arrival at the Andover station of the Boston & Maine Railroad of the first consignment of student trunks. No guitars or knapsacks in sight.

Sports Rivalry Reaches A Termination

As Andover enters another quarter century of history, a bit of tradition will come to an end as the public schools conclude the current semester.

It is in the area of interscholastic sports.

For many years, the traditional Thanksgiving day football game was between Andover and North Andover, or in years past, Punchard and Johnson.

While North Andover excelled and maintained winning records and respectable performances from its athletes in many of its competitive endeavors, its football fortunes in recent years reached a low ebb.

For this reason, the North Andover authorities decided last year to withdraw from the Merrimack Valley conference, of which Andover is a member and join the Cape Ann league.

Thus the traditional Thanksgiving day game between the two towns, the morning when the alumni shows up in large numbers to renew acquaintances and enjoy a morning of football and pageantry has come to an end.

Andover athletic officials regretted the decision, noting that despite the Golden Warriors holding an upper hand in the lengthy series, the games were hardly ever runaways and were traditionally hard, clean-fought contests, always exciting.

North Andover athletic officials, still felt that its male population dictated that a change in conference membership was necessary and the final Golden Warriors vs the Scarlet Knights contest was held last Thanksgiving day.

Beginning on Thanksgiving day this year, Andover will meet Central Catholic of Lawrence. The game will be played at the Eugene V. Lovely field in Andover for the first two years, with an option to have the holiday contest moved to Lawrence's municipal stadium on alternate years thereafter.

Andover high's sports picture has been a bright one in recent years.

A year ago the Golden Warriors basketball team won the Class B Eastern Massachusetts championship at Boston Garden and just missed capturing the state crown.

The team went to the Boston Garden tournament in 1971 and made a commendable showing before being eliminated before reaching the finals.

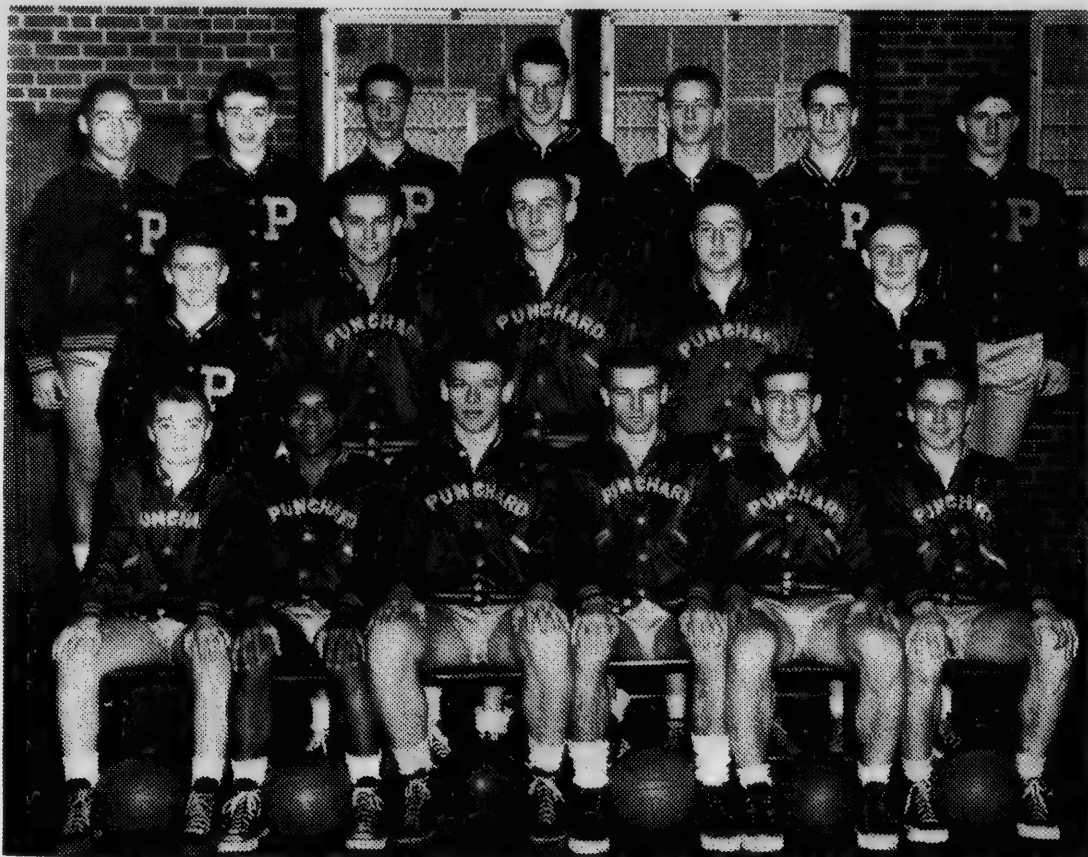

The track team during the past several years has captured just about every title available, in both indoor and outdoor competition.

The basketball team has been under the direction of Will Hixon, while the championship tracksters have been under the direction of Head Coach Dick Collins who is also head football coach.

The athletic program has been developed extensively in the past few years under the direction of Athletic Director Donald D. Dunn, who will be retiring this year

Townsmen Has Grown With Andover's Rise

The growth of Andover has been paralleled in some respects by the growth of the Andover Townsman in the last quarter century.

Irving E. Rogers, publisher of the Lawrence Eagle-Tribune, bought the Townsman in 1949 from the Consolidated Press and Andover Townsman. At the time, the circulation was less than 1,000. At present, it stands at 3,650 and is still growing.

Within a year after Mr. Rogers took over control of the Townsman, the newspaper became one of the first in New England to use the offset printing process.

Briefly, offset involves the photography of entire pages of type and superimposing the image on a sensitized plate, thinly etched, instead of pressing the image on a matting paper - or stereotyping - a process almost as obsolete as high button shoes. The result is a clearer impression of the finished product.

But the growth of the Townsman has not only concerned itself with mechanical improvement; it also has involved excellence in reporting and editing. In the last 22 years, the Townsman has received 30 awards in various categories from the New England Press Association, an organization of weekly newspapers in the six northeastern states.

One of the most gratifying accomplishments was the winning of the 1963 First Place Award for general excellence.

The present managing editor of the Townsman is Robert E. Finneran. The business manager is Raymond B. DeRuisseau, who joined the paper when Mr. Rogers became publisher.

It was a dry summer, in 1952, when Sidney P. White examined one field without irrigation (above), then looked over another that had been watered.

Battle Of Bottles Began 11 Years Ago

Only 11 years ago, the Andover Townsman carried full page advertisements extolling the virtues of non-returnable beverage bottles. It was a joint effort by a group of beer producers.

Today, an ecology-minded group of Andover residents is waging an uphill struggle to educate the public to insist on returnable bottles again, in the interests of cutting pollution in landfill areas - a 1971 word for the old town dump.

Blood Plasma For Civilians

Free supplies of surplus Army and Navy blood plasma for use in transfusions for civilians was made available by the Red Cross through the State Department of Public Health, in 1946. The supplies were received by the Isham Infirmary at Phillips Academy. The plasma, having been useful in World War II on the battlefield to combat severe shock, was released for civilian use with the end of the fighting.

Double Bill For 12 Cents

Twenty-five years ago, the Andover Playhouse was advertising four changes of programs weekly, and all double bills. In one week, taken at random from the files of the TOWNSMAN, Gary Cooper and Paulette Goddard were appearing in "Northwest Mounted Police," and Alan Ladd and Veronica Lake were starring in "This Gun for Hire." Admission was 10 cents, with 2 cents extra for the Federal tax.

Signs Of Change

In 1948 Election

One of the earliest signs that Andover was beginning to lose its seemingly impregnable Republicanism came in the Presidential election of 1948. Thomas E. Dewey of New York carried the town over President Harry S. Truman, 4151 to 2037. But State Senator Philip K. Allen, Republican of Andover, was defeated for re-election by John W. Coddair Jr., of Haverhill.

We've been making the most popular shoes for the world's finest athletes since the year 1. And, as all great athletes do, they've demanded, expected and received the best from us.

Converse, Tyer Division, is one of Andover's oldest employers dating back to 1856 and ranks 2nd in sales among almost 100 canvas and rubber footwear manufacturers in the nation.

Converse is proud to be putting shoes on the pros (and amateurs, too) and proud to be part of Andover's 325 years of progress and development.

68 MAIN STREET

It's been 325 years since Cutshumache, a Sagamore, sold the land areas which are the Andover of today for six English pounds and a coat.

Those 325 years encompass a lot of history and the Andover Consumers Cooperative is proud to be a part of that history. We are relatively young, 32 years, but our continuing growth attests the solid role we play in the Andover of today.

The CO-OP has expanded as shown in the photos and is still growing to better serve the townspeople. When a new demand develops the CO-OP is ready as exemplified by our very active Organic Foods department. We are ready with plans for tomorrow's needs too. The CO-OP has acquired land along Chestnut Street to Bartlet Street, ready for expansion and to provide additional shopper convenience.

We will continue to grow in facilities and service to this fine old New England town.

... and still growing in 1971!

Fire Truck Splits The Towns

There's hardly a young red-blooded American male youngster who has not thrilled to the sight of a gleaming red fire truck speeding to its destination.

For that matter, as the ages pass the particular piece of emergency apparatus maintains an electric charge for many as it responds to a call.

Here in Andover, however, a fire truck led to the division of the community into what is now two corporate entities.

In 1646, Andover was composed of all the lands within the present borders of North Andover, Andover, even some parts of South Lawrence.

The original town of Andover was founded in what is now North Andover and commonly referred to as the old center.

Later, as the community grew, the town divided into North and South parishes, still a single community, however.

The North Parish Unitarian church in North Andover was the meeting place for residents of that district and as the south portion of the town grew, so did a new meeting house, South Church.

Things moved along smoothly over the years with members of both North and South parishes conducting their annual business transactions and the community running along a calm course.

This proceeded until about the mid 1850's when it was decided a new piece of fire apparatus was needed to serve the ever growing township.

The need was mutually agreed upon, but its location became a source of irritation between North and South parishioners. The northerners felt it was most needed there, while the South Parish residents staunchly insisted the new apparatus be placed in their section of the town.

The squabble eventually led to the South Parish getting the fire apparatus, and the North Parishioners deciding to go it on their own, received their charter of incorporation as the town of North Andover in 1855.

It is strange that in this year of Andover's 325th anniversary, both communities have witnessed tremendous growth during the past quarter century in the very department that caused the division of the town.

Here, in Andover, a new public safety center houses the most up-to-date fire apparatus and equipment.

The department has witnessed tremendous growth in manpower during the past 25 years under the direction of the late Chief C. Edward Buchan and its present administrator Chief Henry L. Hilton.

Apparatus is all of modern vintage, fully equipped to meet any and all emergency needs, such as chemical fires, explosive dangers, etc.

It has also maintained older apparatus to be used for fill-in purposes should some of the modern machinery be out of service for repair.

Latest addition to the department in the line of apparatus is a modern snorkel, which replaced the 25-year-old aerial ladder truck in 1970.

It was used for the first time in mid-winter 1970. The general alarm fire at the Andover companies on North Main Street was fought in sub-freezing temperatures.

The former aerial ladder was transferred to the newly opened West Andover substation built and opened in the late 1960's.

The new public safety center on North Main street is considered to be among the most modern central fire station facilities in the area.

Done away with in the process of opening the new station was the sounding of the signal, so familiar at 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. daily and on no school days, as well as the sounding of the location of a fire.

A new modern message receiving and transmitting console, plus radio communications with the emergency vehicles provides more rapid reporting and response than the former air horn signal.

As for manpower, the chief is assisted by a deputy chief covering each shift and a lieutenant is in charge of crews at each substation as well as the Central station.

North Andover within the past year, opened a new substation in the center portion of the town. The location of the new station, which serves the most rapidly growing part of the community, is within a stone's throw of where the original station was built following the battle of the 1850's.

That original station still stands and is used as quarters for Cochichewick Lodge A.F. and A.M.

As is well-known today, there are traditional rivalries between the two towns, but that town-splitting battle of over a century ago is well forgotten in these days of mutual aid among fire departments.

Major conflagrations find Andover fire fighters quickly responding to aid North Andover and other surrounding communities and vice versa.

But, had it not been for a piece of fire apparatus, Andover might be a bulging metropolis.

From the police blotter during the week of Sept. 5, 1946, the TOWNSMAN reported, "a boy threw a stone into an auto on School Street last Thursday. When brought to headquarters, however, the boy stated that he hadn't meant to hit the car." Case closed.

Summer School For Veterans Conducted

While summer school programs may seem new to Andover, the town initiated such a program back in 1946.

The program was to benefit returning veterans of World War II and ran from June 24 through Aug. 17.

State funds were to be provided for the program but were late in arriving.

Due to the delay, the Andover Servicemen's Fund provided financial aid to get the program started on time.

Teachers in the high school conducted the summer program, through which the returning veterans were able to complete their high school diploma requirements and in many cases go on to colleges and universities in the fall.

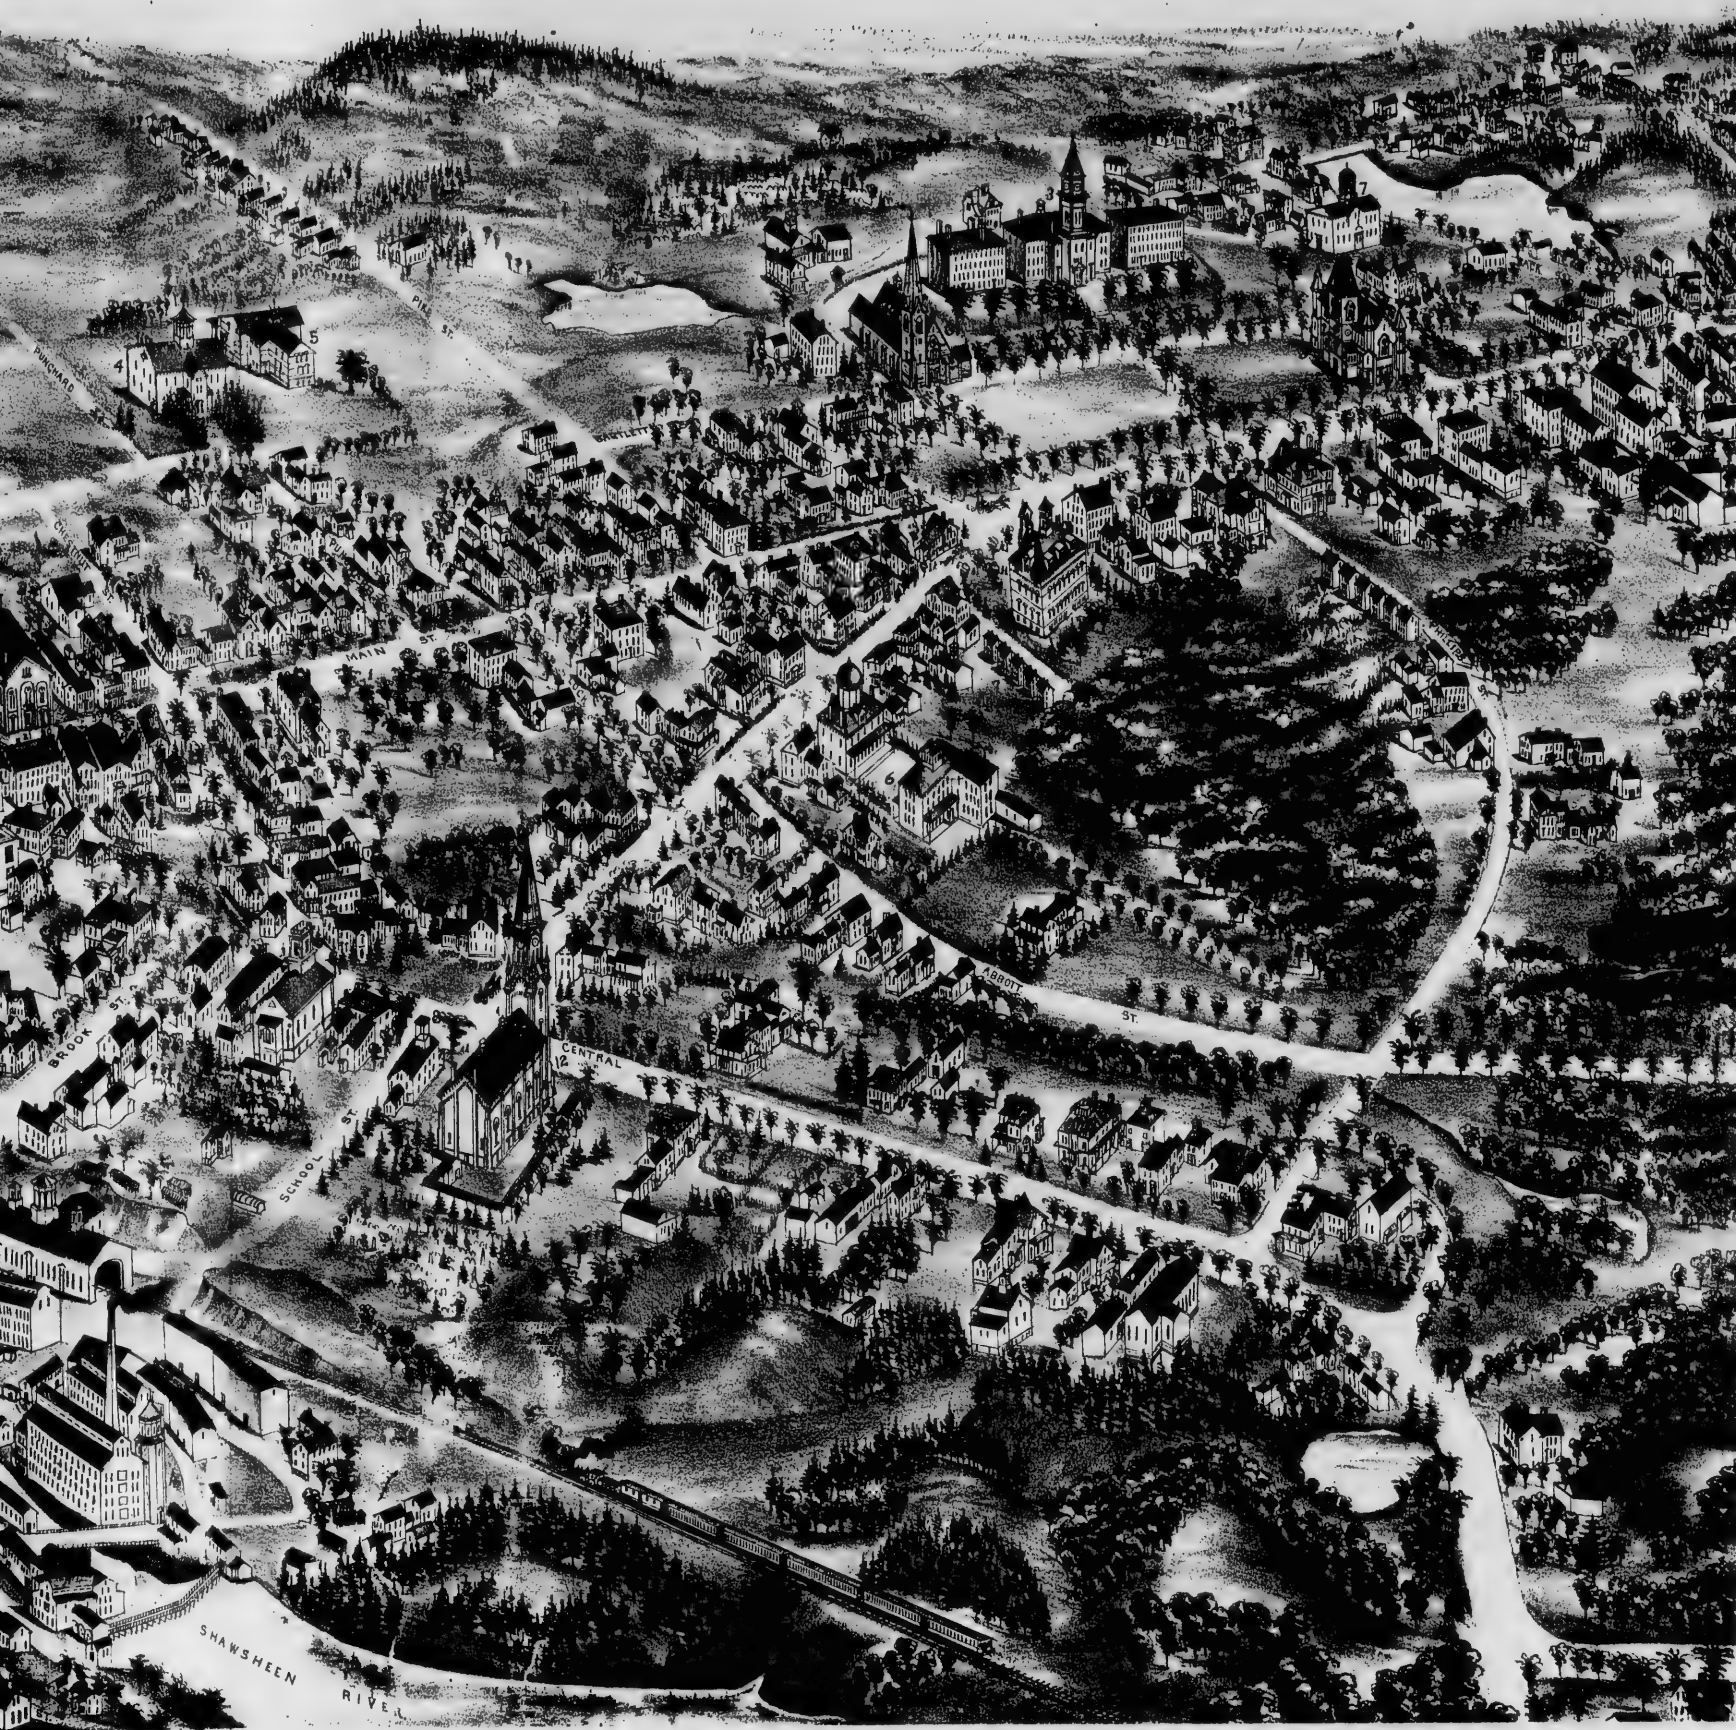

Public School Growth Predicted

In October of 1960, the Planning Board's consultant predicted that Andover's public school population might reach 9,000 in the next three decades. The count was 6,074 as of January 11, 1971. The same consultant predicted that the town's population would grow to 40,000 in the same period.

Politics was the group of members.

Andover Adds Industrial Tone

Despite some slowing down in recent years, Andover in the last quarter century has added an important industrial and business tone to its rural suburban image.

Where in 1946, the Tyler Rubber Company, the Marland and Shawheen Mills were major industrial complexes, the town has attracted several impressive new plants in areas once occupied by farms.

And where in 1946, the American Woolen Company was the major tax payer, it was replaced, after its demise, by the Raytheon Company, an electronics enterprise. Still more recently, Gillette Toiletries has carried the heaviest impost.

Yet, Raytheon remains near the top as the result of its moving into a new plant in West Andover. And like such enterprises as Gillette, Allied Chemical and Brockway-Smith, a manufacturer and distributor of building materials, Raytheon's new plant was designed to harmonize with the wooded surroundings.

But not the least of the complexes is the North Atlantic Regional Internal Revenue Center, situated off Lowell street, near an interchange of Route 93, in West Andover. This Federal facility employs from 3,000 to 5,000 persons, depending on the season of the year. Many of these employees are temporary, reflecting opportunities for many semi-retired persons.

$77,000 Raised In Salvage

When the Andover Salvage Committee wound up its World War II activities, in late 1946, Harry I. Emmons, the chairman, reported that from the sale of scrap metal, waste paper, tin cans and rags, the committee had earned $7,728. Of that, the Servicemen's Fund Committee received $5,255 and the home service department of the Red Cross $1,774.

Andover Is Second In ABC Program

Andover became the second community in the nation to join in the A Better Chance program, which provides a public education opportunity for the disadvantaged.

Copied from a program which originated in Hanover, N.H., and Dartmouth College, Andover began the program under a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation and public subscription.

A home for the first ten boys was obtained on Main street, near the Phillips Academy campus.

The boys from various parts of the United States entered Andover high school and its first graduates, now in college, have shown remarkable progress.

The program is directed by local citizens who had sought the original pledges for the initial three year program and it's now continuing activity.

The boys are supervised by adults and join in community activities with other students from the high school. On Sundays they join families in the community participating in religious and recreational activities.

Boys chosen for the program spend a summer preparing to enter the public educational system at Dartmouth in Hanover, N.H. They then begin their studies in their new environment in September with the opening of the school year.

Since Andover instituted the program, North Andover has also initiated a similar program, along with other public educational systems throughout the country.

Phillips Academy has also been a participant in the ABC program.

HAZARD ELIMINATED

Officials of Phillips Academy agreed to cooperate in a plan to eliminate a bottleneck and traffic hazard on Main street, near the campus, in 1949, to provide for a double lane highway with a turf safety island in the center. The plan had been in existence since 1932, but had been shelved for economic reasons in the beginning and by shortages of manpower and materials in World War II.

Private Education Grows In Last Quarter Century

Although the name Andover traditionally conjures up the image of Phillips Academy, the town also is noted for such private independent institutions as Abbot Academy, a girls' school founded in 1828.

In the last quarter century, both institutions have added to their enrollments and facilities to meet the special demands for the education of students living away from home, even though both have continued to accept day students within commuting distance.

Both institutions began joint studies of the possibility of merger in the fall of 1970, only to suspend the project because of financial problems. Instead, the two schools have undertaken new studies aimed at the possibilities of expanding present coordinated programs that would enable each school to retain its independence.

Although still looked on from the outside as schools geared to higher income families, both have undertaken broad programs aimed at giving their students a concern for contemporary problems of an urban society. This has involved special projects away from campus, and if the enthusiasm of young faculty members is not smothered by hoary tradition, both Phillips and Abbot will have vastly changed images in another decade.

But, in some areas, Andover also is known as the home of the Pike School, a private institution founded in 1926 for a group of neighborhood children. Incorporated in 1944 as a non-profit institution, the Pike School has expanded so rapidly that it now occupies a 30-acre site in the Sunset Rock Road area at the easterly end of town. Classes are offered for children from kindergarten through the ninth grade.

While Andover historically was considered a Yankee Protestant town, the influence of the Roman Catholic church has had a leavening affect for many years, as a result of the growth of industry in neighboring Lawrence.

Even before Pope John XXIII touched off the ecumenical movement in the 1960's, Catholic-sponsored education was being established in town. In addition to St. Augustine's primary school, an adjunct of St. Augustine's parish, the Franciscan Order opened a seminary in West Andover in 1930, for the early training of priests.

The Seminary, famous for many years for its display of Christmas lights, in the last few years has begun to admit young men with no intention of becoming priests, as students in its high school program.

Then, within a year of one another in the mid-1940's, Sacred Heart School, a grammar school for boys, opened in Shawsheen

April can be a fickle month, as shown here when snow fell in 1953, postponing spring for another few weeks.

Village under the direction of the Brothers of the Sacred Heart, a group of lay teachers, and Merrimack College, staffed by the Augustinian Fathers, opened a few hundred yards up the street, on the North Andover line.

Despite increasing financial problems all around, growth of private education has not diminished.

Andover Citizens Ahead Of Parade In Ecology

More than half a century before ecology became a household word, public spirited citizens of Andover demonstrated their concern for preserving the town's rural heritage by banding together to establish the Andover Village Improvement Society.

For years concerned chiefly with tending byways and parks, largely at the expense of individual members, the Society in recent years had undergone a change of direction and has turned to the acquisition and conservation of reservations of land for the enjoyment of posterity.

Within the last two years, students and faculty members of Phillips Academy, led by Jameson French, a member of the class of 1971, and Thomas E. Cone, an instructor in biology, and Nathaniel B. Smith, a mathematics instructor, added new life to the general movement of preserving and restoring natural resources.

The work of the society had been augmented by the creation of a Conservation Commission, a State agency dedicated to the preservation of green belt areas in suburbia, also through acquisitions.

Between them, the two organizations offer hope for Andover's ecological integrity in the next quarter century.

July was haying time, back in 1949, and here two farmer's daughters are shown pitching in on their father's farm off Lovejoy Road. May Noyes, on the ground, and Mina were the daughters of John L. Noyes.

Religion Vital Part Of Andover Community Life

Religious freedom was among the prime reasons for the founding of these United States.

Here, in Andover, religion has been a vital part of community life.

Indicative of the role religion has played in the development of the community has been evidenced in the past 25 years when several new churches have located within the confines of the town.

Puritanical dictates of years past and accompanying "Blue Laws," have given way in recent years to a spirit of ecumenism, with those of Catholic, Protestant and Jewish persuasion working toward a single devotional purpose.

For many years the Catholic population was served by St. Augustine's parish, originally a mission church, later staffed by priests of the Augustinian order.

St. Augustine's also serves a mission church in Ballardvale known as St. Joseph's.

As the town grew with the influx of new homes and families, particularly in the western section of the town, the late Archbishop Richard Cardinal Cushing saw the need for an additional Catholic church in the area.

St. Robert Bellarmine church was built on Haggetts Pond road to serve the needs of the Catholics of West Andover, Tewksbury and South Lowell.

The Protestant community was also to grow during this same quarter century, meeting the needs of varied sects.

The Lutheran Church founded a congregation, initially meeting at Peabody House on the campus of Phillips Academy before constructing its new church edifice on South Main street.

The Andover Bible Chapel built a new structure for its congregation on Lowell street.

The Unitarian-Universalist church of Lawrence needed new facilities and decided upon a plot of land off Lowell street in Andover to construct its new, modern design building.

In Ballardvale, where two churches had united years previously, the members decided to build a new structure and home for its pastor.

The Christian Science congregation also built a new church on North Main street and maintains its reading rooms on Main street in the center of town.

As for the Jewish community, Temple Emanuel of Lawrence, obtained land off Lowell street, and plans to build a new temple and school facilities in the future.

Existing congregations expanded their facilities, such as Christ Episcopal church, which constructed a new parish hall and religious education building.

Added facilities were also built at West Parish church.

In recent years the ecumenical spirit has been most prevalent in Andover.

The traditional three hour service on Good Friday, has, as its leaders, pastors and ministers representing all Andover churches.

As part of the 325th anniversary observance, an Ecumenical service is scheduled for 4 p.m. Sunday at Cochran Chapel, Phillips Academy.

All of which exemplifies the religious spirit of Andover.

Night Classes Back

A sure sign that World War II had ended came in the winter of 1946, when Phillips Academy announced the resumption of the Evening Study Program,

SERVICE TO THE COMMUNITY

When this photo was taken... The Essex Savings Bank was already 30 years old

The Essex Savings Bank (now Essex Broadway Savings Bank) was incorporated on March 15, 1847 and opened for business on October 6th of the same year. In those days, long past, the Merrimack River's waters flowed along a south bank that was Andover and since the very first, Essex Savings has served Andover patrons by unnumbered thousands.

The photo above, taken about 1877, is a view looking west along Essex Street from the corner of Lawrence Street. The Essex Savings Bank building at the extreme left was completed in 1875. Our new building, on the same site, was completed in 1956 and still serves Andover residents by the thousands weekly. It is one of the most modern and convenient bank buildings in this section of the country.

Now, to serve the people of Andover and North Andover even better, Essex Broadway is opening a new branch office on Chickering St. in North Andover early next fall. Ground breaking for the new building will be in mid-June.

Shepard Re-Elected In 1946

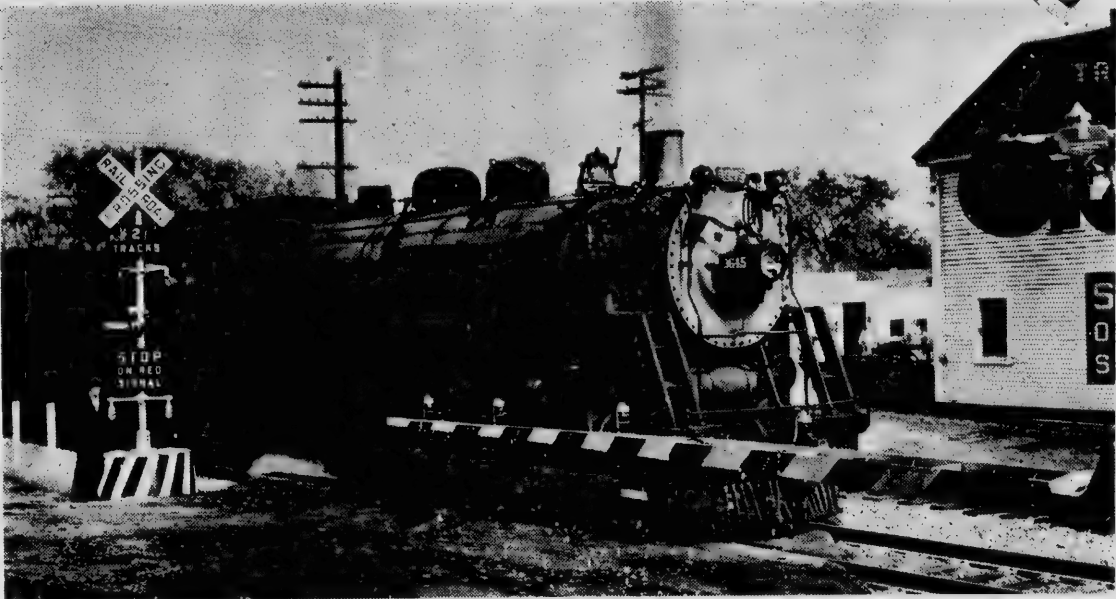

In the town election 25 years ago, Sanborn A. Caldwell and John H. Kelly unseated William Barron and P. Leroy Wilson from the Board of Public Works, with Howell Shepard re-elected selectman and the Rev. Frank E. Dunn won a close fight for moderator. Voters interested in the returns, grouped around Town Clerk George Winslow's desk in the Town House as returns trickled in. The results had all been tabulated by 10 p.m. on that March night in 1946. And, as was traditional then, the returns from Precinct One presaged the eventual outcome, justifying the slogan, "as goes Precinct One, so goes the town."

Later, Mr. Shepard was to move to New Hampshire, where he became the first director of the New Hampshire Sweepstakes Commission.

And now there is none. This shows the Ballardvale Station of the Boston & Maine Railroad as it appeared in 1950, just before the main building was razed and the shed became a waiting room. Now, even the shed has disappeared to make room for a block of apartments.

One of the last of the steam locomotives on the Boston & Maine Railroad chuffs through Andover, in 1950. The final run was in the spring of 1956.

THIS 143 YEAR OLD ANDOVER INSTITUTION SALUTES THE TOWN OF ANDOVER ON ITS 325TH ANNIVERSARY

A century and forty-three years have passed into history since the Merrimack Mutual Fire Insurance Company was founded by a group of Andover townspeople in the Old Locke Tavern in Andover on February 28, 1828. (Now an apartment house located at 111 Main Street.)

It is indeed a far cry from the Old Locke Tavern of 1828 to the distinctive office buildings of The Andover Companies located in the center of Shawsheen Village in this year of 1971. These two imposing structures - the larger of which is shown above - are significant of the progress made down through the years by these Andover insurance companies.

The Home Offices in Shawsheen Village are the nerve center of their far flung and fast growing business which now extends into thirty states and operates with an organization of more than one thousand, eight hundred agents and employees. Premiums have more than doubled in the five years ending December 31, 1970.

after many years of service to the Andover school department.

Under his tutelage, a soccer team has been started, one which has featured championship teams, winning its initial title in its first year of competition in 1970.

Hockey has become a most popular winter sport at the school, competing weekly during the winter months at the Billerica forum. In 1969, the Andover hockey team toured Europe and Russia and competed against teams there in an effort toward international understanding.

With the construction of the new Andover High school, came development of modern play areas.

The football field and its accompanying track were dedicated on Thanksgiving Day, 1970, prior to the Andover-North Andover football game, to Eugene V. Lovely, long-time coach and principal of Punchard High School, forerunner of Andover High.

A plaque is located on a stone commemorating the service given the schools by the popular "Pop" Lovely for many years in Andover.

Included in the playfield complex are a number of tennis courts, outside basketball courts, field hockey areas, baseball fields and general play and practice fields.

The area complements the Andover playstead, where junior high sports are conducted and Little League, Junior League and Babe Ruth League games are played during the summer months.

Highway Changes Affect Eating Out

New highway patterns in the last 25 years have changed dining out habits in Andover.

In 1946, motorists drove for miles along Route 28 to have lunch or dinner at Fieldstone's, on South Main street. It was compared favorably with the Toll House in Whitman, Mass., south of Boston.

But the opening of Interstate 93, by-passing Andover, made it too inconvenient for impatient travelers to go six miles out of the way to pick up two-lane Route 28. Today, Fieldstone's has become the home of the Andover Elks.

On the other hand, Route 93 gave the Valle's Steak House organization a chance to establish one of its branches at a handy interchange of the express highway, at River Road, and the place is usually packed, geared as it is for fast service in meat and potato items.

And just in the shadow of Valle's is the old Shattuck Farm, where Andover families once drove re-

Urban Renewal Killed

Veterans, Senior Citizens Provided With Housing

The year 1946, Andover's 300th anniversary, was a joyous occasion for many reasons.

First, of course, was the fact that the town had grown, progressed, and prospered in good times and bad for three centuries. It was, indeed, a time for celebration, but for even greater reasons - World War II, then described as the war to end all wars was over.

Returning servicemen and their families were in need of housing in those years and Andover was quick to respond with state assistance.

The Andover Housing Authority was founded in the post war years and supervised construction of the Veterans Housing units on Memorial Circle off Morton street.

The formation of the authority which receives state funds for construction of its buildings, led later to meeting a need for Andover's senior citizens. More on that later.

The Housing Authority, with its one state-appointed local member and four elected local officials, supervises and operates the low-income housing units in Memorial Circle, principally for veterans of all wars, but with some exception to other qualifying persons.

The units, since their opening have been well maintained and supervised over the years and all units are continuously occupied, with a waiting list for tenancy almost constantly.

In the early 1960's, state legislation provided funds for construction of housing units for the elderly.

Under the supervision of the Andover Housing Authority, Chestnut Court, a development of some 40 units was constructed adjacent to the Veterans units.

The opening of these units answered a need for Andover's respected senior citizens - a place to enjoy their retirement years.

A community room was furnished by local groups and organizations for the enjoyment of the occupants.

The units were designed in such a manner that should an emergency arise among one of the lone occupants of the unit a signal could be given which would bring aid immediately from either a neighbor or from public safety agencies.

Garden clubs constantly keep the area beautified.

So popular was the initial project, and so much was the need for additional units displayed by the applications for occupancy, that the Housing Authority members in the late 60's requested and received town and state permission to erect a second project.

The additional 40-plus units regularly on Saturday nights for bean suppers or Sunday nights for a sandwich and some home made ice cream. The farm recently was sold to a developer.

Before the days of supermarkets, the local butcher was a man of stature in any town. This is a 1946 picture of James E. Greeley at his store on Essex Street.

were opened and immediately occupied in 1970 with the same advantages offered as in the original project.

The second project is located directly behind the original Chestnut Court unit. Its construction was delayed as the local authority battled with the state over the heating facilities for the new buildings.

The local authority finally after tenaciously pursuing their theories on the matter, finally convinced the state housing board that their thoughts would represent savings to state, town and residents alike. Thus the delay proved worthwhile.

There is still a need for additional units for the senior citizens and the Housing Authority members are pursuing the possibility of obtaining some apartment units on Post Office avenue. The units will need some renovation to meet state standards and safety measures for senior citizen occupancy, but local Housing Authority members are hopeful that the conversion can take place and meet the continued need for caring for those who have given much to Andover and are deserving of unity and companionship in their retirement years.

The Housing Authority within the past year has been granted further responsibility and authority through legislative action and is moving in this direction.

It currently has under study, provisions for obtaining housing for low-income families.

This is in its early stages and action along these lines is expected to progress in the months ahead.

As for the senior citizens, much has been done to make their lives useful and enjoyable.

A Council on Aging was formed in the late 60's.

This group has provided trips for the senior citizens including trips to various sections of New England, visiting historic spots, foliage tours, movie trips, etc. There are monthly dinners for the group served at nominal prices at the Greater Lawrence Regional Vocational Technical High school.

Andover Haven, a meeting place for the senior citizens, is located on Barnard street under the supervision of the council. Here, the older residents of the community can meet for recreational activity, reading, television viewing, lessons in various crafts such as sewing and knitting.

A station wagon was provided to the council by the Andover Service club, to assist the older residents with transportation needs such as shopping trips, visits to professional offices, etc.

In summary, since 1946, Andover has met the needs of veterans and senior citizens alike - simply underlining the fact that Andover is a community that cares and acts - when the occasion arises.

Makepeace of Andover, just returned from Europe, opened the discussion by referring to the history of Christian worship from the days of the Apostles, that study being necessary to understand the present church life of Europe, with its grand cathedrals, and solemn liturgies. The speaker had been specially impressed

The sale of all course tickets and reserved seats will be held in the Lower Town Hall, Saturday evening, Oct. 15, at 7-30. The sale has been so arranged that ladies will find no find no inconvenience in attending it. Purchasers will be allowed only three tickets each, unless more are required for their immediate families, in which case the number will be limited to five. Only 630 course will be sold.

The meeting of the American Board at Springfield was attended by nearly all the professors and students in the Seminary, and by some other of our citizens. Dr. Selah Merrill was chosen chairman of the Committee on Turkish Missions. Prof. Smyth's two speeches were printed entire in the daily papers. As already known to our readers, the action of the Board confirmed the policy of the Prudential Committee in regard to candidates holding the hypothesis of a future probation for unevangelized heathen. This will of course discourage for the present Andover men from applying for missionary service under the Board.

Various Things.

We do not always believe all the newspapers say, but there is intrinsic evidence of the correctness of the statement that "President Hyde of Bowdoin College is fond of tennis, and he and Professor Woodruff are frequently pitted against each other on the courts at Brunswick." The advantage of prompt newspaper advertising was well illustrated last week, when a lady called at the TOWNSMAN office to report a purse found on the sidewalk. It was soon ascertained that the owner was a young lady in Abbot Academy, and the money restored to her, greatly to her joy. The argument is from the less to the greater—if such a result can be gained from simply speaking in a newspaper office, how much more can be expected from advertisements found in

Embarassing Situation Corrected

When Andover observed its 300th anniversary in 1946, the town felt it most desirable to have the Mayor and Mayoress of its namesake community in England as its guests.

The invitation was accepted and the committee made arrangements to house the guests at the Andover Inn.

What the committee failed to realize, however, was that the Mayor and Mayoress of Andover, England were not husband and wife, making the single room reservation at the inn a rather embarrassing situation upon the arrival of the guests.

Arrangements were quickly made to provide proper accommodations and the distinguished guests were more than enjoyably accepted by the town and expressed their sincere appreciation for the invitation to participate in the festivities.

Letter From A Queen

The Andover Townsman in 1948 reproduced a letter from Queen Elizabeth II to Miss Margaret Reid, secretary of the British Empire War Veterans Auxiliary, thanking the members for their gifts of nylon stockings and handkerchiefs on the occasion of her marriage to the man who became Prince Philip.

Accountant Accomplished Man's Task

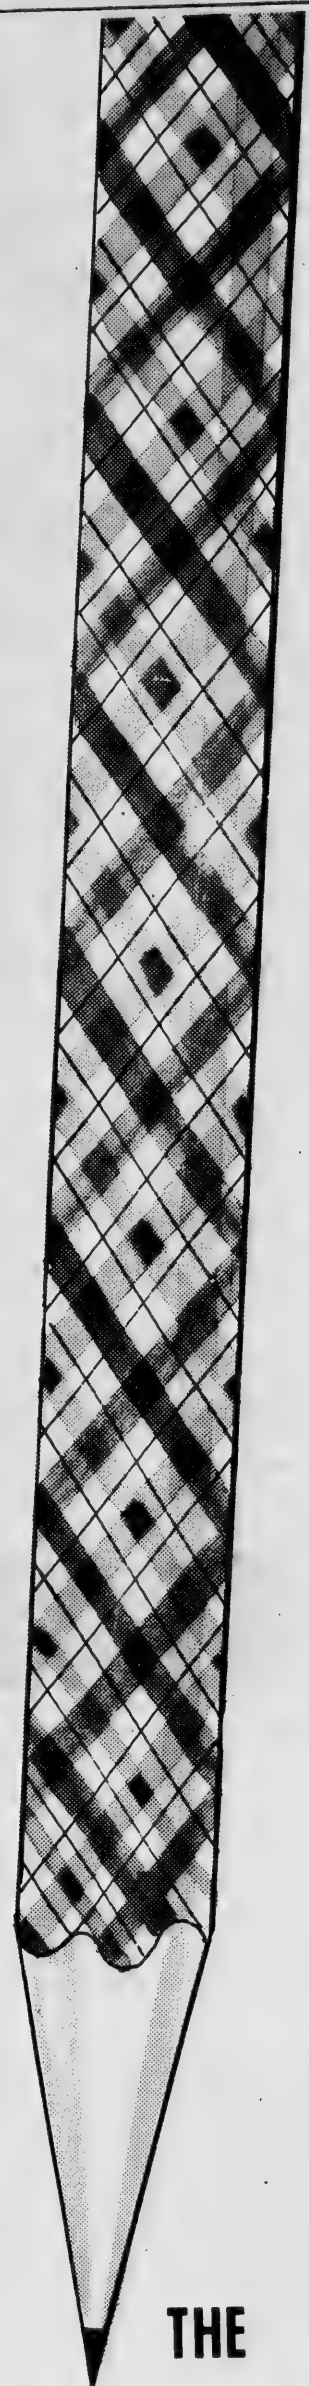

Andover's first town accountant, Mrs. Mary Collins Regan, retired in 1946, after 15 years on the job. The selectmen, realizing that it was a man-sized job, appointed a man as her successor. He was George C. Napier, a veteran of World War I and a past commander of the Andover American Legion post.

Mrs. Regan, before her marriage, had worked in the town clerk's office and was appointed accountant when Andover adopted the state system of accounting, in 1930. The return of her husband from World War II helped her in deciding to resign.

Non-Graded Math Program Will Begin In September

By Helen M. Eccles

Andover's elementary school children are about to go through a de-grading experience in mathematics, but teachers feel that they will be better for it, come September!

The elementary schools are moving into an individualized (non-graded) math program in September, and students will all take placement tests in the next two weeks to determine the functional level at which each will begin learning math in the fall.

This means that beginning in September, a third grade child, for example, will start learning and practicing math topics at precisely the level indicated by his June placement tests, and proceed through these to the next at his own pace; this will be instead of starting all of his class, or even a group of them, at the same level in math, to proceed at a uniform pace which would be too slow for some, too fast for others, and just right only for a few in the middle of the group.

The man who has been explaining this to Andover elementary school parents at PTO's and parent meetings is Philip Dyer, the Doherty School teacher and Andover math coordinator who presented the Individualized Math System (IMS) to the school committee.

Math Coordinator Dyer needs volunteers to help correct the placement tests, June 1 - 11, and urges interested parents to contact their schools immediately to volunteer and get the details. Volunteers need no special experience, will be helping the system move into its ungraded math system, and they themselves will get a closer look at the particular math program which administrators and a teachers' inservice math workshop have finally settled on as best for the Andover system.

The IMS math program, approved by the school committee at its last meeting, will get its Andover dress rehearsal in the elementary summer school, and be used in all elementary schools in the fall.

At that time, Dyer explains, each student will take another test in a given mathematics topic, to determine which skills in that topic he already has, which he needs review on, and which he needs to learn new. This philosophy of individualized instruction is that a pupil learns only what he does not know, although post-tests in each area point up needs for review, until the mastery of the skills in any topic are solid.

The educators' choice of the Individualized Math System for Andover schools jells a policy which has been evolving over a period of several years.

Individualized instruction in math, as in reading, has been a goal of the system since well before Bancroft School was opened. The big questions have been the readiness of the system's teachers for individualized teaching once the right program was found, and the cost, since such a program meant a continuing per-pupil cost for instructional materials, assignments, tests, all consumable.

As new school committeeman Dr. Frank Griggs put it at his first meeting, "We all agree that individualization is our goal. The question is, how far can we travel toward it? How much of the ticket can we afford to pay?"

Not very far, it seemed this winter. Administrators and the teachers math group had chosen what seemed to be the best individualized program, and planned to pilot it in two schools, while developing an interim halfway-individualized curriculum for the rest of the elementary system. Yet after budget cuts, the math teachers' workshop eliminated the individualized program because of its $10 per pupil cost, which would have to be repeated for each pupil each year.

Yet the workshop teachers and administrators became more and more convinced that all elementary pupils should go right into a mathematics program that let them learn at their own capabilities, and that the teachers were ready to handle it. Impasse.

Light began to show at the end of the tunnel late this winter, when the group learned of the Individualized Math System, developed at the Regional Educational Development Laboratory for the Carolinas and Virginia.

Math committee heads Dyer and Dorothy Minzner, Bancroft teachers Jane Collins and Sanborn Principal Joseph Normandy visited the Lemon Road School in Falls Church, Virginia, to observe the program in action - and got help and critical evaluation of the system from that school's principal, Ann Merchant, an Andover native!

The IMS program had two interesting features, math coordinator Dyer explains: the IMS program turned out to be a refinement of (and, in his opinion, an improvement over) the program Andover had reluctantly turned down: for example, it has some group math learning activities, to supplement the individualized approach.

Second, and very simply, the instructional materials are laminated in plastic. This means that teachers can erase each pupil's work for re-use of the materials by pupil after pupil, and year after year, instead of buying new materials for each pupil.

Superintendent Dr. Kenneth R. Seifert told the TOWNSMAN this week that the IMS math program will cost $10 a pupil, ($30,000) the first year, then drop sharply to a little over $1 a pupil the succeeding years, over a five year period. At that time, a comprehensive evaluation will take place. Seifert feels that by then, the schools would have enough data to produce their own individualized program, instead of having to buy programs again.

Seifert also emphasized that the IMS and other individualized program packages come equipped with built-in evaluation of results, individually, and system-wide. A parent will be able to get a clear profile of his child's mathematical progress and capabilities within the program, and the community will be able to judge the effectiveness of the program system-wide.

Dyer has pointed out to the school committee that an individualized math program does pose a need for teachers' aides. He and the administration are counting on parent interest in an effective math program, and the self-motivation it seems to evoke in students, to produce some volunteer aides at each school. If mothers will help with test-correcting and other clerical details a few hours a week, Dyer says, the teachers can be freed to help each individual child learn mathematics at his own level and speed.

Chapter Confers Degree

On Tuesday, May 28, the Xi Sigma Chapter of the Beta Sigma Phi Sorority conferred the Exemplar Degree on the following Beta Mu Chapter members: Mrs. Donald Carrine, Mrs. Paul Farrington, Mrs. Haffner Fournier, Mrs. Nicholas Gregory, Mrs. Leonard Peltier, Mrs. Frank Raymond, Mrs. Frank Simons, Mrs. Jerome Underwood.

The candlelight ceremony was held at the home of Mrs. Luis Salazar. The second formal candlelight ceremony of the evening was the installation of the new Board of Officers for 1971-1972. A business meeting then completed plans for the Sorority Area Luncheon which will be held on June 5 at the Old Powder Mill, Maynard. The area from Beverly to Fitchburg - Andover to Framingham will be represented at this Luncheon meeting by the various chapters of the Beta Sigma Phi Sorority.

The plans for the Fall Fashion Show which will be sponsored by the Xi Sigma Chapter under the Co-Chairmanship of Mrs. George Farrell and Mrs. David Roberts to benefit the Heart Fund were finalized. Fashions by Cherry & Webb Company will be shown at the Rolling Green Motel on Thursday, Sept. 23. The evening, which will begin at 8 p.m. will be rounded off with entertainment, fine pastries, and coffee. Tickets will be available from all Sorority members and also various business locations after June 15.

Another Milestone

Andover will, this weekend, observe a significant point in its history.

Various special events will mark the 325th anniversary of the founding of the community.

Many natives of the town can well remember the tercentenary observance 25 years ago.

Much has happened since that time.

The past quarter century has seen Andover accelerate more in growth than at any time in its history.

Yet, while it has grown, while it has become more industrialized, and has been faced with the problems of mushrooming population and demands on municipal services, the town has met them well.

It can be said, we feel, as Phillips Brooks said so many years ago in his description of the town, that it has remained the sober, patriotic community, despite its growth and its problems.

The first settlers had their problems and met them well in the New England tradition.

With thousands of newcomers to our borders in the past quarter century, Andover retains its good, old fashioned New England traditions.

As the town observes its anniversary this weekend, marking the historical past, it also looks forward to a bright future.

Already under construction is a water treatment plant on the shore of Haggetts Pond - this to meet the needs of the community in augmenting a dwindling water supply to meet today's needs as well as those of the future.

In education, our famed Phillips and Abbot Academies continue to serve educational needs of hundreds annually from throughout the nation and some foreign countries.

Industrially, the town has grown tremendously in the past quarter century, with the addition of multi-million dollar plants.

It is expected that continued growth will come in this particular area in the years ahead.

Andover's downtown area has grown to meet the needs of its residents and those of surrounding communities.

As times change, Andover, obviously has changed to meet the demands placed upon it.

In the field of public education, modern methods have been advanced by an interested, devoted administration and faculty ever mindful that preparation to meet Andover's needs in a modern society can be met only through increased attention, study and preparation for education of the child entering the world of the 1970's and '80's.

In the 325 years of Andover's historical past, it has met the call to national duty and many have sacrificed for the preservation of liberty. Some are still serving on foreign lands and some have sacrificed for our continued freedom.

As we look back on a rich heritage, gained through sacrifice and effort, we can also look forward to an even brighter future, we feel.

Problems have been met and conquered for over 300 years by a town fortunate to have the foresight to recognize needs, and to have had men and women willing to serve their community to insure the preservation of the town as a proper blend of New England tradition, mixed with 20th century needs.

As this 325th anniversary is observed we feel the town recognizes its past with pride and looks to its future with what can probably be best referred to as youthful maturity.

Mutual Benefits

Commendable, we think, is the work of some young Abbot Academy students, who have been working with youngsters in Lawrence in a tutorial program.

Under the direction of teachers at the academy and in Lawrence, ten girls, have been working with youngsters in the Lawlor school in the city.

The program should be beneficial to both parties.

The girls from Abbot are committed to teaching careers and are obtaining a good foundation in working with these youngsters.

The children, on the other hand, in need of extra attention, are receiving confidence which they lacked and were unable to obtain due to inability to provide individualized attention.

Through the program, the academy students will provide for themselves a good foundation for their future teaching careers. This is an important initial step in preparing to meet the needs of entering the field of modern education.

For the youthful students, they have been gaining a self-confidence and advancing in their class work at a pace they would previously have been unable to attain.

Mutually beneficial programs such as these should be encouraged.

Veterans Administration Warns On Cemetery Lots

The Veterans Administration is not affiliated with private cemetery operators offering burial plots free or at nominal cost to veterans, the agency emphasized today. VA officials said some cemetery operations advertise in a way that suggests a connection with the VA or some other government agency.

Government officials noted that VA and veterans service organizations have received complaints from recipients of such advertising literature. Complaints from veterans about allegedly deceptive advertising have also been received.

Similar complaints have been received by the Department of the Army's office of Chief of Support Services, which provides grave sites to honorably discharged veterans in national cemeteries on a space available basis.

There are 85 national cemeteries around the country. Thirty-nine have been closed due to lack of space, and six others are expected to be closed within five years, according to Army officials.

Some private cemetery operators use this lack of space in national cemeteries in their advertisements or solicitations to veterans.

Although it is acknowledged that many offers are from reputable firms, veterans are advised to make sure they thoroughly understand any contracts they sign. Veterans often find there are costs and additional expenses they did not anticipate.

What Our Readers Say

To the Editor of the TOWNSMAN: I was shocked and disappointed at the disgusting behaviour of many of the parents who attended tonight's Andover School Committee meeting!

Mr. Russell and some other parents who were concerned about their children's safety presented sound arguments, with facts and figures, to back up their opposition to the recent school committee decision regarding busing. The School Committee, who are also sincerely interested in the safety of the children, were ready to listen and the chairman tried to set up an orderly meeting.

This was very difficult because of the actions of many of the parents there - too many. They were a disgrace to a generation who is quick to point out the shortcomings of my generation and their children would have been ashamed and embarrassed at the cat-calls and personal insults which they hurled at the committee - a lot of "garbage"! These parents, who obviously do not know how to conduct themselves at a meeting or present their arguments in a sane manner, should come to some of our high school Senate meetings, where such uncivilized actions would never take place.

Now this is what really tore it for me and kept me from sleeping tonight! The next item on the agenda was a well-planned and vitally important suggested program for drug control in Andover. And what do you think the over-whelming majority of these parents who are supposedly concerned about the safety and health of their children did? They waited around a few minutes to make sure the busing discussion was really closed - and then they silently and quickly slipped away into the night! This is adult logic?

To the Editor of the TOWNSMAN:

A project to construct two pre-viewing, recording, and tutorial booths at Andover East Junior High School is in the stage of completion. This project, originally to be contracted for under the school's renovation plans three years ago, was not carried out. Seeing the need, a student incentive crew offered to prepare this facility for the benefit of the staff and student body. With school department financial assistance, the group planned, organized and gave up many a weekend, afternoon, or night period to work.

Noting the sincerity and seriousness of purpose of the students, several townspeople were moved to give of their talents and support to encourage such a constructive youth activity. Bruce Douglass was instrumental in the construction of the structure. William Marruzzi of Andover Electric provided the necessary electrical materials and installation. Both these gentlemen deserve and have the admiration of the incentive group for their aid and encouragement of students who truly are trying to help their school. The incentive group wishes to bring this and a public thank you to the attention of the community.

To the Editor of the TOWNSMAN: This is a salute to today's high school students, from one who received his diploma 47 years ago next month.

With a matter of hours to press time for the 325th anniversary history of Andover's last quarter century, there was need for a picture of the new High School.

Briefly, a secretary in the principal's office called a photography teacher on the public address system.

To the Editor of the TOWNSMAN:

In today's editorial entitled "Bountiful River" you say "we should all say 'Thank God' for the Merrimack". You can't really be serious! I don't mean to be unkind (you're probably a real nice fellow) but what a strange approach to a nasty problem!

Here in Andover we are soon to be getting our drinking water from one of the "10 dirtiest rivers in the country" according to the Federal Water Pollution Control Administration - and that is certainly not a very appealing situation. Don't you feel any responsibility at all to speak out for clean water? Are you not at all interested in investigating to find out what are some of the sources of the river's pollution (even naming companies perhaps), telling us what Commissioner Giarrusso has done or plans to do, what we can do as individuals - who can we write to, etc.

It would be interesting to report to us what quality of drinking water the new treatment plant is going to be able to deliver from such a dirty river - will it have a bacteria-testing program that will meet the minimum criteria of the U.S. Public Health Service? Will the water be free of viruses as well as bacteria?

Cleaning up a dirty river is everybody's business - government, industry, citizens. What an ideal situation your paper is in to speak out - instead of calling the Merrimack a "bountiful river" call it what it is - "a dirty river" - then keep on talking about it week after week - show pictures, give a progress report, remind us what we can do. Who knows - with your help the Merrimack might one day be clean again!

superb pitching were the chief ingredients. The hitting attack was led by Bob Arrigo, Jon Bixby, and Bob Burke all of whom had home runs. Sean Parker struck out five of the last six batters he faced to gain the win.

The Doherty brothers were the big hitters for the Astros with Phil hitting a grand slam home run and Henry banging out two hits. Larry Lamagna playing the catcher's role for the first time threw would-be base stealers out and caught foul flies with enough skill to make Johnny Bench turn green with envy. Ruth League Has 21 Games

The Andover Fabe Ruth baseball team will open its 21-game regular season with three games next week.

Manager George Lefebvre's club, a member of the eight-team Greater Lawrence Fabe Ruth League, kicks off the campaign next Tuesday night, June 1, with a road game against North Andover at Rogan's Field.

The Andover entry returns home to the East Junior High Playground Field for games on Thursday, against Prospect Hill, and Friday against defending champion Methuen. Both games begin at 6 p.m. There is no admission charge to the games, and the boys on the team would appreciate the attendance and support of all Andover residents.

The team has been practicing for several weeks now, but rain has hampered the sessions somewhat.

Methuen and Tower Hill are rated among the best in the league, but Andover also looks strong with eight "veterans" from last year's club back. The Andover entry finished with a winning record in 1970, placing third before losing to eventual champ Methuen in the opening round of the playoffs.

Once again, everyone is welcome to attend the games.

portant as reading and writing," said William Russell, 3 Elysian Drive, in presenting the petitions.

The committee turned back pressure from Committeeman Frank Griggs and members of the audience to rescind their May 11 transportation cut vote, and make further expense budget cuts. Instead, the school committee passed member Frank Hill's motion to direct the administration to define areas in the salary budget from which it could eliminate $16,500 to turn back to the town, enough to restore both the late buses and the present busing radius; this to be done in consultation with the finance committee, to be sure that the FinCom will release a matching $16,500 from the town's reserve fund to the school expense budget to restore this amount of the transportation cuts. Since the schools cannot mix the salary and expense budgets, this device is necessary to absorb any of the Coderre amendment expense budget cut in the larger salary budget. Committeeman Griggs voted in the negative.

Hill told the crowd the expense budget was the wrong place to take cuts, since any cut here cuts into the instructional program. Several citizens spoke against the prevailing sentiment to ask that instructional material and educational tools not be sacrificed to busing. Not all of the evening's heat was directed against the committee. Walter Hughes of Lockway Road said he would sign the bus restoration petition, but was concerned about the structure of the schools and fed up to his ears with Coderre's interference with the running of the schools. Committeeman Frank Griggs objected, reminding him that an overwhelming majority of the town meeting had passed the amendment.

Superintendent Dr. Kenneth R. Seifert said that the schools were hamstrung by the way the town meeting had voted the cut, although they could have handled an across the board cut, if the allocation were left to the schools. "But we must resolve this; it's bad for the kids. We must resolve it and get back to the business of educating children."

Seifert backed the Hill proposal to restore busing services by penalizing the salary budget, saying it would hurt, but hurt less than cutting elsewhere in the expense budget.

"For the sanity of this town," Seifert continued, "If you have a concern, please call and find out what the facts and the administration's position really are, first." He cited a recent allegation that the superintendent's travel budget contains "tens of thousands of dollars." Seifert pointed out that the total is actually $8,000, and this amount covers the travel expenses, including recruiting, of the entire professional staff of 385. The superintendent's secretary was fuming about this Wednesday morning; she revealed that the superintendent nearly always pays his professional travel expenses out of his own pocket, and has put in only two travel vouchers all year.

After the school committee showed flexibility on the busing issue, the meeting cooled down. After a five minute break, a number left, but a normally attentive audience heard Health Coordinator Anita Charpentier present the schools' comprehensive drug policy, and warn of students' dropping out, physically, or psychologically or with drugs, alcohol. The policy, drawn up by students, administrators, guidance counselors and parents, will be discussed and voted at next week's meeting. Dr. Joseph Harrington, Andover resident who is head of the Greater Lawrence Drug Council, said a community should be concerned over their children's safety from dropping out and drugs, as they are for their safety on the way to school, since they stand to lose more by this route.

The school calendar may change next year; because of the many three day holidays, the schools might substitute a single March vacation for the February and April vacations, with an eye toward an earlier June closing. Another alternative would give a number of four day weekends, and no week long vacation. Audience reaction was sympathetic to changing the traditional calendar.

ALL SCHOOLS ART EXHIBIT draws a crowd at the West Junior High school this week. The schools celebrated the 325th with drama, art and sports activities.

So the meeting ended in a civil manner, but the beginning left its mark on at least one person - student committee member John Wooten, who sat shaking his head when it was all over, and the crowds were leaving.

"I can't believe grown people could act so rude and insulting. I can understand concern about safety. I can agree with some of the points. But I'm glad no other high school students could hear and see what I have. They'd be hurt and disillusioned, and there are some borderline kids who - well, I'm afraid hearing this could have made up their minds about some things. All we hear at the high school is Responsibility! Act like adults! Anyone who acted like that at one of our meetings would get detention!"

Advisory Council Drafting By-Laws

The PTO Advisory Council which was initiated as a means of school-home communication by Superintendent Kenneth R. Seifert when he came to Andover two years ago, has begun drafting by-laws to put itself on a more solid footing.

The aim is (1) to increase its effectiveness as a vehicle of communication and cooperation between schools and homes, and between the various schools in the system; (2) to encourage active participation by parents in the educational affairs which affect the community, and (3) to foster cooperation and coordination between the PTS's of the various schools.

Some suggestions the by-laws committee has made have been to include a school committee member as a non-voting member of the PTO Advisory Council, to ask that the PTO Advisory Council have a non-voting member of the School committee, that the Advisory Council act as a communications center to connect the schools and the homes.

Bylaws drafted to spell out the Advisory Council's role, will be proposed to the full body of the present Advisory Council. If acceptable to this body, they will go to the individual PTO's for ratification.

Members of the by-laws drafting committee are: High School: Dorothy Gulezian, Norman Viehmann; Doherty: Susan Bates, Nancy Mulvey and Caroline West; Bancroft: Margo Bixby, James Garrett, James Reid; East Junior High: Walter Hughes, Sue Stephens, Richard Wilson, Robert Zollner; Sanborn: Paul Kolodny, Thomas Mitchell; South: Phoebe Kwass; West Elementary: Jerry Hochschwender, Frank Orlando.

The PTO Advisory Council, which Superintendent Seifert set up as a discussion group, has had one or two representatives from each school in the system. It gave each PTO an opportunity to discuss its own or mutual problems on a broader basis, and gave the administration an opportunity to discuss community problems with the PTO representatives, with an eye to improving communication and education in Andover. Some items discussed this year have been the drug problem, in town, how to effect better use of school facilities by taxpayers, the Doherty Addition, and transportation as a safety factor.

Personnel Changes At Schools

Personnel changes at the schools were approved Tuesday night, principally granting West Junior High Principal William Hart a year's leave of absence at half pay, to study the middle school system in England; the transfer of High School assistant principal Charles Adams to the same post at the West Junior High in September, and the resignation of Miss Marie-Therese Marzullo, head of the high school English Department. Principal Philip Wormwood told the TOWNSMAN that Miss Marzullo had informed him of her intent to resign soon after she learned that her father, who lives out of state, had suffered a serious heart attack.

Flags To Be Placed On Graves

Prior to the Memorial Day Observance on Monday, local Veterans Organizations will place more than 1000 American Flags on the graves of deceased veterans in local cemeteries. In some cases, this tribute to departed Comrades may have been overlooked. If anyone has knowledge of a grave not honored with a new flag, they may contact the Veterans Office in the Town Hall, and a new flag will be provided.
